A Family Endeavor:

Gochenaurs Work Together To Raise Birds Of A Feather

The upcoming holiday has lots of Americans "talking turkey." Join Lancaster Farming for the annual turkey story, as this year the Gochenaur family, Airville, York County, discusses the bird business. Photo by Michelle Kunjappu AIRVILLE (York Co.) — It's the centerpiece of many tables and part of a cherished American tradition.

And now the Gochenaur family is giving thanks for the custom of putting a turkey on the table.

Bob and Karen, along with children Tanner, 13; Sawyer, 9; and Alexa, 6, have been raising turkeys since May 1996 and have enjoyed the farming lifestyle the operation has afforded to them.

The Gochenaur family raises 70,000 turkeys, or four flocks a year, for Pilgrims Pride, based in Texas.

At Stone Chimney Hollow Farm, a 110-acre operation, 40 acres are in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP), 30 acres are in woods, and the balance of the acres are rented out for pasture and hay production.

"This is something we'll be able to keep doing as we get

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) Several hundred Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) members gathered for three days this week to elect leaders, chart policy positions, and recognize outstanding members during a banquet.

The statewide farm group's 52nd annual meeting was conducted at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

The event included meetings of such groups as the board of directors, young farm and rancher members, and voting delegates. Members also participated in seminars such as modern farm management, crop insurance, the 2002 agriculture census, and the Farm Bill update.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The beef and hog operation at J.E. Kettering Farms helps Jim Kettering carry on what is now generations of farming.

The 300-acre farm, with corn, soybeans, and wheat was first rented, and then owned by Kettering's father Henry, a lifetime farmer, who also grew up farming, as did generations before him.

In 1950 Henry Kettering began renting the farm that he would later purchase in 1962. Jim Kettering purchased the farm in 1976.

Kettering graduated with a degree in agriculture from Penn State in 1968, then came back and formed a partnership with his father.

High Retail Milk Prices Puzzle Farmers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy farmers are noticing strong retail prices for many dairy products and wondering why the increases aren't showing up in their milk checks from wholesalers.

A milk marketing specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said while there are extenuating circumstances, the unusual dairy market raises tough questions for producers and consumers.

"Dairy farmers are facing three crushing blows: low milk prices, rising feed costs and the aftereffects of drought conditions that have limited their feed production," said Ken Bailey, associate professor of dairy marketing and policy. "And consumers fac-

CATTLE: Compared to Thursday, slaughter cows sold steady to firm. Buyer attendance was fairly light, although the few buyers on hand kept the bidding relatively active. Cow carcass cutout values were over 3.00 higher early last week, which in turn has left some spark in the market to kick off the week. Slaughter bulls sold with a lower undertone on a light test. The quality of the bull run was a lot lower when compared to the past few weeks, with bidding moderate to weak due to the decrease. Slaughter cows made up nearly 52 percent of the run.

Compared to Thursday's very active market, slaughter steers sold mostly steady on Monday, trending with a higher undertone on the bulk of the Choice and Prime steers on Tuesday. Bidding was very active Tuesday on the high Select and low Choice steers, along with the higher dressing stock, as prices trended as much as 2 00 higher The quality of Monday's run was about average, with a lot more Select and overfinished steers on hand than normal However, Tuesday's supply was made up of some fancier type fats, with several high dressers on hand bringing as much as 72.75. A good portion of Tuesday's run sold in the 70's, although there were only around 120 on offer; therefore the demand definitely outweighed the supply, which could have been one of the largest reasons prices were higher. Although it makes sense that packer demand is picking up as the February live cattle contract at the CME is pushing 78.00; therefore, many buyers are willing to give in the lower 70.00 range now, knowing in a few short months there is a possibility those same cattle will be in the upper 70.00 range. Slaughter Holsteins sold steady to firm in a light test. A fairly good run of slaughter heifers on Monday sold with a firmer undertone, with Tuesday's supply very light. Lean slaughter cows sold firm to .50 higher, with Breakers and Boners trading firm to 1.00 higher. There were not enough slaughter bulls on offer for a market test. The supply included 28 percent steers, 6 percent heifers, 35 percent cows, 1 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1295-1475 lbs 70.50-72.00, fancy single 73.00, few Monday 66.85-70.50. Select and low Choice 2-3 1170-1495 lbs 65.25-67.75, few up to 69.00, 61.00-65.00 Monday. Select 1-3 1130-1480 lbs 61.00-65.35.

Yield grade 2 1175-1695 lbs 42.50-43.50.

CALVES: Compared to last Tuesday, veal calves sold 5.00-10.00 higher in very good buyer interest. Holstein bulls suitable for special-fed veal barns sold sharply lower. Bulls this week failed to hit 120.00 after trading a high as 145.00 last week; also, there is a very noticeable price spread between the number 1 and number two bulls as buyers are being very selective of the quality. A light test of Holstein heifers sold with a higher undertone after several weeks of lower prices. The supply included 711 in the state graded sale, with around 87 percent of the graded supply returning to feed.

VEALERS: Standard and Good 85-115 lbs 30.00-44.00. Utility 45-85 lbs 20.00-30.00, weaker 10.00-20.00. CATTLE· Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold fully 1 00 to instances of 2 00 higher on a very attractive run Both buyer attendance and activity were very good right from the beginning as there were nearly 400 head of steers on offer, although you would have thought there were only 100 as buyers were extremely aggressive, especially on the fancy ones Holiday demand, coupled with a futures Board that is lined up to be very bullish this winter, have forced many buyers to either leave at the end of the day with an average of over 70 00, or to leave with an empty trailer. The slaughter heifer supply included over 100 head, which is a noticeable increase when compared to the last couple of months. When compared to Tuesday's light supply, heifers trended firm to fully 1.00 higher as buyers were quick to procure the well finished stock. Due to a very light test of Holstein steers on Tuesday, a full market comparison was not available; however a higher undertone was noted on Thursday's very nice run On a very good run, Lean and Boning cows sold firm to 1.00 higher; with Breaking cows trending 1 00-3 00 higher. With over 500 cows on offer the demand and supply should have been very even, however buyers were very active in procuring their needs as the holiday season is quickly approaching. Cow carcass cutout values continue to climb, even in the face of the Thanksgiving holiday where turkey is the meat of choice. A slaughter bull trend was not established due to Tuesday's very light supply. The supply included 31 percent steers, 8 percent heifers, 40 percent cows, 7 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

New Holland Hog Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
November 18, 2002
Report Supplied By Auction

HOG RECEIPTS: 690 head, last Monday 619; last year 908.

Compared to last Monday, barrows and gilts sold mostly steady to weak; with the fancier 220-270 lb hogs trending as much as 2.00 lower. Buyer activity was only moderate on the bulk of the run, and relatively void on the 220-270 pounders that were bringing from 29.00-31.50 last week. However, with the Western terminal markets trading their 220-270 lb hogs from 26.00-27.00; the local trade still carries a premium. Also, one must remember that the Thanksgiving holiday is only a couple of weeks away; which traditionally slows the pork trade down a little, as most families are not planning on sitting down to pork chops.

New Holland Feeder Pig Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
November 20, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Receipts: 390 Last Week: 508 Year Ago: 373

Compared to last week, there were not enough feeders of any comparable quality or weight for a market test. There were a couple of feeder buyers on hand that were interested in owning a few lots; however they were no competition for the slaughter buyers. With that said, slaughter pigs sold sharply higher in very active bidding, with special emphasis being placed on the 30-35 pound pigs.

Last week the 30-35 pounders were trading from 40.00-80.00, with this week's supply bringing from 135.00-150.00 as the holiday demand has definitely kicked in. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat bids remained under pressure due to slow export sales and fund selling on the Boards. Corn and soybean bids moved slightly higher for the third day.

Corn received strength from an overnight sale to Taiwan. Export optimism has also been a supportive factor for soybean bids this week.

Wheat steady to 14 cents lower. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 cent higher. Soybeans steady to 2 cents higher.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NOV. 25–DEC. 1, 2002

THANKSGIVING DAY, NOV. 28

DON'T FORGET THE CRANBERRY SAUCE!

An evergreen bog plant, the cranberry is closely related to the blueberry. Our native American cranberry, larger than the European variety (which is also found in North America), is the one grown commercially. It has been in cultivation at least since 1840 and is prevalent on Cape Cod and in other parts of Massachusetts, as well as in New Jersey and Wisconsin.

Commercial growers prepare their bogs for annual flooding. The highbush "cranberry," which is of the honeysuckle family, is unlike the bog cranberry, which comes from the heath family.

A thankful heart is the parent of all virtues.

–Marcus Tullius Cicero, Roman statesman and author (106–43 B.C.)

THE OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If snow begins at mid of day,
Expect a foot of it to lay.

Anvil-shaped clouds bring on a gale.

TIP OF THE WEEK

Potatoes roast more quickly if they are washed in warm water and then allowed to soak for a moment.

CRANBERRY-APPLE SLAW

12-ounce bag whole cranberries
1/4 cup orange juice concentrate juice of 1 lemon
6 large 'McIntosh' or 'Cortland' apples chopped nuts or raisins (optional)

In a food processor, blender, or meat grinder, coarsely chop or grind the cranberries, adding the orange juice concentrate and lemon juice until just blended. You can make this part of the recipe ahead and refrigerate until needed. Just before serving, core apples and shred them in a food processor or with a hand grater. Combine with the cranberry-orange mixture and toss until mixed. Add chopped nuts or raisins as desired. Serve immediately.

Makes 6 servings.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER Summary for week ending Nov. 15, 2002 Total Receipts: 493,200, last week 346,900. Direct: 76,600, last week 66,100 Video/Internet: 26,600 head, last week 3,500. Auction Receipts: 390,000; last week 277,300. This week's reported auction volume included 28 percent over 600 lbs and 42 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, yearling feeders sold firm to 2.00 higher with instances of 3.00-4.00 higher on weights over 800 lbs that have a chance to finish in February or early March. The CME February Live Cattle contracts are presently trading near 76.50 and this week's fat cattle market broke 70.00 for the first time since April. Demand was much improved for calves this week and prices trended steady to 4.00 higher. In the Southeast and Southern Plains the full advance was placed on weights under 500 lbs, but in the upper Midwest and Northern Plains the biggest gains were noted on the heavier calves. Most areas reported improved weather conditions as being a major market driver for calves. This week marked the most popular turn-out date for winter wheat pasture and the warmer temperatures and drier fields allowed most backgrounders to put their stockers to work. The early-fall moisture has created lush wheat pastures and many grazers will be able to increase their stocking rate, which should keep the fire burning under calf prices. Early purchases were cheap enough to allow buyers to pay these higher prices and still keep a decent average. Yearling prices continue to inch closer to the sun, with 8 weight steers routinely selling well into the 80.00 range. This is the same 80.00 range where many 5 weight calves are selling, leaving cow-calf producers scratching their head. In the past, 85.00 yearlings meant 110.00 calves. Not so this year, as the dry summer caused many herds to be placed on feed early and left a short supply of yearlings coming off grass this fall. At the same time, the excellent late-summer grass and emergence of early wheat pasture allowed many cattlemen in Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas to hold onto their 6 weight cattle, instead of putting them on feed. This resulted in much lower October placement number on Friday's cattle-on-feed report than most analysts expected, only 87 percent of last year's. Marketings were toward the top of most guesses at 104 percent and the USDA pegged on-feed numbers at 91 percent of a year ago. This should result in a significant boost to the CME Futures market, which is odd, following a cattle-on-feed report that was forecasted to be bullish.

Guest Editorial By
Guy F. Donaldson, President
Pennsylvania Farm Bureau

Somehow we have reached the point where a few townships have decided it suitable to adopt a local ordinance that defies statewide public policy and threatens the future of farming in the commonwealth. When one strips away the misleading (or uniformed) statements about agriculture by those advocating unrestricted local control of farming, we get to basic questions that Pennsylvania's farm families are asking our neighbors (as well as our state lawmakers). Questions such as:

• We have responsibly worked with lawmakers to adopt some of the most stringent and progressive laws and environmental safeguards for agriculture in the nation (such as the Nutrient Management Act). When did it become OK for a few township officials to declare these state laws null and void, and impose their own version of regulations and limitations on agriculture?

• Farm families have nowhere to go for relief. The ordinances can be overturned in court (and have been), but farmers don't have the tens of thousands of dollars for the legal battles. When did it become OK to expect farm families to bear the cost of ensuring compliance with state law by localities?

• Many sons and daughters of farmers want to continue in agriculture, but they need the potential for a decent living, which often requires expansion of the farm. What's the chance they will choose a future in agriculture if a local ordinance means they can't grow their enterprise?

• Pennsylvanians have spoken loudly and clearly about the need to preserve farmland and the rural character of the state. How is that achieved without preserving family farms?

• Agriculture, the state's largest single industry, not only provides fresh products of high quality, but also generates substantial employment for other business and industry. Do Pennsylvanians agree with the few local officials who are promoting a patchwork of policies and predicaments across the commonwealth for farming? Shouldn't these laws be dealt with uniformly at the state level?

Legislation (Senate Bill 1413) that addresses this dilemma for farm families earlier passed the state Senate. Its provisions are simple. Municipalities are reminded that they can't pass ordinances that are contrary to existing laws and overall best interests of the commonwealth, or otherwise discriminate against agriculture. Courts may require townships to pay the legal costs of a farmer's challenge to an ordinance if the court finds that the township officials knew their action was illegal. Likewise, courts may require farmers to pay legal fees if a lawsuit is found to be frivolous.

The legislation is languishing in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives as the General Assembly nears adjournment. Pennsylvanians can stand up with our farm families by calling your state Representative today to urge passage of Senate Bill 1413

To Use Biological Fungicides In Greenhouse Vegetable And Floriculture Crops

Cathy Thomas, with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Integrated Pest Management Program, reports diseases in greenhouse vegetables and floriculture crops can be managed effectively with biological fungicides (biofungicides).

A biofungicide is composed of beneficial microorganisms, such as specialized fungi and bacteria that attack and control plant pathogens and the diseases they cause. These specialized fungi and bacteria are microorganisms that normally inhabit most soils. Biofungicides can be a viable alternative to chemical fungicides and can be used as part of an integrated disease management program to reduce the risk of pathogens developing resistance to traditional chemical based fungicides.

An example of a widely used commercial biofungicide in the greenhouse industry is Trichoderma harzianum (TH) strain T-22 (Plantshield). TH protects plant roots from pathogens such as Pythium, Rhizoctonia, Fusarium, Sclerotinia, and Thielaviopsis. TH will also suppress foliar diseases such as Botrytis and powdery mildew.

To optimize the effectiveness of TH or any other biofungicide, apply before the onset of disease development (preventative treatment) since they will not "cure" preexisting pathogens. Early application of the biofungicide protects the roots against bad fungi, allowing for better development of root hairs. Always use biofungicides in conjunction with standard disease cultural controls including sanitation, and weekly scouting.

There are four mechanisms by which a biofungicide controls other microorganisms. The first of these mechanisms is direct competition. Before root infection can occur, pathogens must gain access to the zone closely associated with the root called the rhizosphere. A biofungicide "shields" the root by growing a defensive barrier around the roots, thus preventing the harmful fungi from attacking the root.

The second mechanism is antibiosis. The biofungicide produces a chemical compound such as an antibiotic or other toxin that kills the target organism.

Predation or parasitism of the target organism occurs when the biofungicide attacks and feeds on the pathogen. For this mechanism to be effective, the biofungicide must be present in the rhizosphere at the same time or before the pathogen appears.

The fourth mechanism is induced resistance to the host plant and this occurs when the biofungicide triggers the plant to turn on its own defense mechanisms.

Biofungicides like chemical fungicides must be registered by the EPA. Growers must read and follow the label to determine if the intended use has been approved. Always read the label. A few examples of biofungicides used in the greenhouse industry include AQ10, Companion, Mycostop, Plantshield, Bioworks, and Soilgard. A list of commercially available biological fungicide products can be found at this Website, www.oardc.ohio-state.edu/apsbcc/productlist.htm. To Participate In A Study Of Deer Hunter Movement

Sproul State Forest again will be the focus of a joint study of deer hunter movement and behavior this fall by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, and the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

Starting on Saturday, Nov. 30, and Sunday, Dec. 1, researchers and students from Penn State and Bureau of Forestry personnel will be visiting campsites in Sproul State Forest to solicit participation in the study. As was the case last year, researchers will ask hunters to carry global positioning satellite units and mark maps to learn how hunters move through and use habitat.

Similarly, on Monday morning, Dec. 2, through Wednesday, Dec. 4, researchers will stop hunters entering the forest to ask them to carry GPS units or to mark maps indicating their hunting activities during the day. Stations along Rt. 144 west of Renovo, near Beech Creek Road and near State Line Road on the western side of the forest will be open from before dawn until after dark.

"Last year the research teams enjoyed great cooperation from the hunters using the Sproul," said Jim Finley, project team leader from Penn State. "It only takes a couple of minutes to receive instruction on using the GPS units and convey information to the team, and every cooperating hunter will have his or her name entered into this year's drawing for three Garmin GPS units used in the study.

"We continue to analyze last year's data from the GPS and maps as well as the survey sent to hunters who used Sproul State Forest last year for hunting," said Finley. "We've learned that hunters use the forest in different ways. Some hunters travel long distances through diverse habitats, while others tend to find one spot and stay put. Do different hunting styles yield different success? This is the question that we will focus on this year. We hope that hunters will continue to support the project."

The Penn State research is aimed at providing information to better understand how hunters use large forested areas such as Sproul State Forest. The data hunters provide, Finley points out, will move the state's deer and habitat management program into the national spotlight.

"No other researchers anywhere in the country are using the type of technology that this project uses and no other studies have enjoyed cooperation like we've received from the Sproul hunters," he said. For more information about this study, contact Finley at (814) 863-0401.

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives should just let SB 1413 die. It is bad legislation. We don't need it. We already have a Right To Farm Law in Pennsylvania. It's a good law. It's not broken, so why "fix it?"

Like so many other laws already on the books, the Right To Farm Law just needs to be enforced. If some townships are violating the state Right to Farm Law, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture should haul them into court and sue their pants off.

Our rights as farmers include responsibilities as good citizens. The fact that we have a Right To Farm Law does not give us a blank check to do whatever we want on our land. We are still bound by the same community standards that we expect our neighbors to abide by.

My family raises vegetables in Lehigh County, where builders pay up to $80,000 an acre for land and have waiting lists for homes costing $400,000 to $600,000. With that kind of building and business boom, local governments might bend over backward to accommodate builders.

They're not. Why? They know

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A HEART TRANSPLANT

Background Scripture:
Ezekiel 36 through 37.
Devotional Reading:
Jeremiah 32:36-41.

We sometime make the mistake of thinking that grace is the invention of the New Testament. Although the English word "grace" occurs only six times in the Old Testament, God's grace is often present there. Ezekiel 36 is just one of those places where we find grace in the Old Testament.

"Thus says the Lord God: it is not for your sake, O house of Israel, that I am about to act, but for the sake of my holy name, which you have profaned among the nations to..." (36:22). God will restore Israel, but not because they deserve it. They cannot afford God's justice, for it will keep them in captivity.

What God is going to do for these people, whose forbears repeatedly violated this covenant, is nothing short of a miracle. "For I will take you from the nations, and gather youfrom all the countries, and bring you into your own land." (vs. 24,25). What a deal!

Undeserved Mercy

Their "abominable deeds" broke the old Sinai covenant. Now God is making make a new covenant with them, a new relationship between God and Israel. They cannot make themselves clean. Only God can do that: " I will sprinkle clean water upon you and you shall be clean from all your uncleanness..." (v. 25). That is grace — something given to us, although we don't deserve it. Something we can't do for ourselves.

Grace, however free and undeserved, is not cheap. God is not downplaying one bit what the people have done. He is not saying, "Don't worry, it doesn't matter." The sins of Israel mattered a great deal to God! As he outlines their sins, it is apparent that these sins were not little pranks and failings he could overlook, but willful disobedience which he could not and did not ignore.

Grace is not just an indulgent pat on the head, but requires repentance on our part: "Then you will remember your evil ways, and your deeds that were not good; and you will loathe yourselves for your iniquities and your abominable deeds.... Be ashamed and confounded for your ways, O house of Israel" (vs. 31,32)

If we do not have the capacity to be "ashamed and confounded" by our ways, we will be unable to experience his grace. It is a free gift, but the ticket by which we claim this free gift is our own remorse.

Beyond Forgiveness

The free gift of grace does not stop with forgiveness: "A new heart I will give you, and a new spirit I will put within you; and I will take out of your flesh the heart of stone and give you a heart of flesh" (v. 26).

Ezekiel signals here a significant change in God's relationship with his people. The commandments of the original covenant at Sinai were written on stone tablets. But the commandments never seemed to be translated from the stone tablets to the hearts of the people. It wasn't that they didn't understand these laws, but that they did not take them into their hearts of "stone."

So, although the old covenant was with the whole nation and would continue to be so, by his spirit the new covenant would also be established with each individual. A heart of stone cannot change, but a heart of flesh can. It was not enough for God's commandments to be written on stone; they needed to be written on human hearts as well. This new and intimate relationship with God is also a gift of grace. By themselves they cannot achieve it, but "I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes and be careful to observe my ordinances" (v. 27).

Medical heart transplants have saved many, many lives. Spiritual heart transplants have saved and will save trillions of souls. Will yours be among them?

"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."

"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.
The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.
The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
November 20, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.3255-1.4260. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.3456-1.4561 mostly 1.3657-1.4059.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9850-1.0300; Class III - spot prices - .8700-.9400.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - 132, Out 0; last week - In 130, Out 0; last year - In 4, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 14, Out 0.

During October, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 11.75 billion pounds, up 2.3% from October 2001. The following are the October-to-October changes for selected states: Texas [6] .6%, New York [2] .5%, Virginia [1] .3%, Pennsylvania -1.1%, Vermont -1.8%, Florida -2.4%, and Kentucky -4.6%.

Heavy rainfall, ice, and snow covered much of the East this past weekend. Ice storms in parts of New England caused widespread power outages and many areas were still without electricity at midweek. This is having some impact on transportation schedules and retail sales. Milk production is steady in the Northeast to slightly higher in the Southeast where heavy rains have retarded gains seen in past weeks. Contacts in the Northeast report that fat tests on incoming milk are starting to increase, but increases in protein levels are slower to recover. This is probably due to feed quality currently available in this part of the country. The need for milk in Florida and the rest of the Southeast is steady to improved.

Bottlers in all parts of the region are going 'full tilt" to cover Thanksgiving week orders. If history has any bearing, bottlers will all but shut down early next week until the post-Thanksgiving weekend. Because of the increasing bottling schedules, fluid milk supplies are reported as tight in the Northeast. Some suppliers are buying milk form other regions to supplement local supplies. Manufacturing plant contacts report relatively light schedules, but expect to "crank it up" early next week when more milk is available.

The condensed skim market is little changed and offerings are adequate to meet most needs. The fluid cream market is firm and prices are about steady. Following USDA's announcement of the increase for the support purchase price of butter, cream buyers are ordering heavier before new prices go into effect. Early-week CME trading did see the butter price jump five cents. Buyers, particularly those that purchase on the previous week's average, are trying to beat that increase. Demand is good and prices are basically unchanged. Usage in egg nog, sour cream, dip, and bottled cream are all up seasonally. Cream cheese production is steady. Ice cream output has been fairly heavy, but some producers will be down for the entire Thanksgiving week. Churning activity is moderate to heavier where more excess cream was offered.

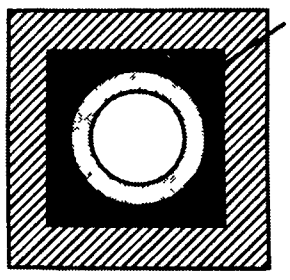
... For New Construction Why Not Examine The "Chimtek Difference."



Chimtek Inner Liners are made of volcanic pumice and high-temperature refractory cements. Its round shape provides even temperature inside flue and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gasses. The volcanic pumice in Chimtek liners adds considerable insulating value.

All three chimneyliner systems distributed by DS Machine Shop are of super design, super performance, and super value. With all their advantages these chimney systems often cost no more than ordinary chimneys. Write or call us for more specific liner information.

SOMETIMES YOU DON'T REALIZE HOW SPECIAL THEY ARE UNTIL THEY'RE GONE.

THAT'S WHY YOU NEED TO MAKE EVERY DAY COUNT.

Sometimes, cattlemen are guilty of becoming so busy, they mismanage their herds. Whether they allow their cattle to run out of forage or graze poor-quality roughage, the result is expensive. When the cattle don't milk well or breed back, they are culled. And, raising or buying replacement heifers is a high price to pay for mismanagement of brood cows. Enter PRO-LIX® liquid supplements. PRO-LIX has proven time and again to be a profitable management tool when used correctly. And PRO-LIX is priced, delivered and fed to your herd for added convenience. If you're looking for a cost-effective supplement to help increase your bottom line, isn't it obvious which product to look for?

Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale Tops $150,000

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — For another year,Penn State students had an outstanding day at the 2002 Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale Nov. 16.

The consignment Holstein sale, co-sponsored by the Penn State Dairy Science Club and the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, nearly topped the one-year-old records for both sale average and sale volume in the history of the event.

This year's sale averaged $2,389 on 64 lots, resulting in a total volume of $152,875.

Jeremiah Fearnley, a junior majoring in animal science, was chairperson for this year's sale. According to Fearnley, this triumphant day represented the culmination of months of hard work by committee members since late April.

"We began looking throughout the Mid-Atlantic region in the spring for consignments. With milk prices lower than in years past, I was a bit worried, but thanks to the support of both the consignors and the buyers, we had a day that we all can be proud of," Fearnley said.

Topping the sale at $6,000 was a two-month-old Dane calf. This daughter of Hunsberger Manfred Sugar sold from a contract family. Sugar is a VG-85 2-year-old that made 28,397 pounds of milk, 1,106 of fat, and 902 of protein, and has been contracted to send sons to AI. The previous two dams are both scored EX-91 and are Gold Medal Dams and Dams of Merit. The calf was consigned by Bill Curley, Dave Mattocks, and Tom Wiker, Montrose, and was purchased by Wiker of Mineral Point, Wis.

The second high selling consignment was Vermillion Salic Tara-Red, a VG-86 2-year-old ready to hit the show circuit next summer. Daughter of a Shady-Lawn-U Locate Red son, Tara was straight-lined with one of the best udders in the barn. She was consigned by Donald and Con-

Summer Internships At American Angus Assn.

JOSEPH, Mo. — The American Angus Association and the Angus Journal, with headquarters in St. Joseph, Mo., will offer several summer internships to college students who want to learn more about breed association work. The paid internships begin approximately June 1, 2003, and conclude in mid-August. Application deadline is February 15, 2003.

The junior activities department employs a college sophomore, junior or senior to assist the planning and execution of junior Angus shows and leadership events. The intern will have the opportunity to travel and assist with the National Junior Angus Show and LEAD (Leaders Engaged in Angus Development) Conference.

Any student interested in the junior activities internship should send their resume to James Fisher, director of junior activities.

The Association's public relations and communications department is looking for a junior or senior-level student majoring in agricultural journalism or agricultural communications who has an interest in the livestock industry.

Primary responsibilities of the position include publicizing Angus shows and activities, which includes writing news releases and photo cutlines, feature articles, and working with black-and-white and color photography. The intern will have the opportunity to travel to various shows and events.

NCBA Says Voluntary Guidelines A 'Good Start'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA's interim voluntary country of origin labeling guidelines provide a good foundation for the development of a market-driven country of origin labeling program, according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

"We believe these interim guidelines are a good start towards addressing some of the complexities surrounding this issue. The USDA should be commended for proposing the guidelines and for allowing a 180 day reaction and comment period. This process allows various audiences in our industry to assess mandatory COL labeling before it goes into effect in September 2004," says Bryan Dierlam, NCBA's director of Legislative Affairs.

Under the guidelines, fresh and frozen muscle cuts of beef may be labeled at retail to indicate their country of origin.

Wythe Willey, Iowa producer and NCBA president, said, "If the consumer decides they find country-of-origin information valuable, and they're willing to pay the extra cost for U.S.-labeled beef, then that information should be provided."

stance Mattison, Wellsboro, and sold for $3,900. She was purchased by Jason Swan, Sherman, N.Y.

Kul-Wave Leduc Janay-ET sold for $3,600 to Jeff Raney of Adamsville. This two-year-old is a fresh Leduc daughter and hails from an EX-90 Broker dam that has produced over 100,000M in her lifetime. She was consigned by Amy Kulik of Carlisle.

According to Dairy Science Club adviser Dale Olver, the sale serves as one of the largest profile events for the club during the year, and has played a major role in the club's success.

"The Nittany Lion Fall Classic is a unique event for our club in that it allows students to gain experience both in marketing and sales of registered Holstein cattle," Olver said.

Students at Penn State take the lead role in every aspect of the sale, including the selection, advertising, and preparation of the cattle.

Dr. Terry Etherton, head of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science and Distinguished Professor of Animal Nutrition, commented on the role the Fall Classic plays in the curriculum at Penn State.

"Our sale provides a wonderful hands on learning opportunity for our students. Because of their involvement and participation, I believe they develop skills that will serve them well throughout life," Etherton said.

The Penn State Dairy Science Club thanks the consignors, buyers, and local businesses who contributed to the sale's success.

The 20th Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale will be conducted Nov. 8, 2003.

Showing off the second highest seller, from left, are Donald and Constance Mattison, consignors; Jason Swan, buyer; sale chair Jeremiah Fearnley, Cassie Miller, and Bryant Hlavaty.

Hog Industry On Slate At Ohio Meetings

COLUMBUS, Ohio —Ohio hog producers may find information presented at the 2003 Agricultural Policy and Outlook Conference helpful in makingmanagement decisions.

The eventwill take place at various locations throughout Ohio from Nov. 18-Dec. 16.

Brian Roe, an Ohio State Extension agricultural economist, is one of several presenters.

"I will be looking at three different areas: issues over the past year and the future outlook for the hog sector in Ohio and the United States, the same type of analysis for the beef sector, and finally some of the issues surrounding new large dairies in Ohio," said Roe. "Of all the issues, I'd say nationally the hog sector is under the most duress. The hog industry has a tendency to have a really good year, then a mediocre year, then a bad year and a year of recovery. So every four years we have this cycle and this year happens to be a bad year."

"You have this psychology develop between low spring prices and projections of a huge fall slaughter run that could potentially push prices down even lower," said Roe. "So there was a massive liquidation of the sow herd during the late summer from large producers — we're talking with 5,000, 10,000, 20,000 sows — that deduced that they weren't going to be making much money and got out of the business."

The mass summer sell-off, said Roe, has resulted in most U.S. and Ohio producers either losing money or just breaking even. About 15 percent of Eastern Corn Belt producers, Ohioans included, were spared the full brunt of the lower prices because they are under contractual agreements with slaughterhouses that shield them from falling prices. Around 25 percent either sell hogs in traditional market places or negotiate for a price at the time of sale. The majority of hog producers (60 percent) are tied to the current price the market offers.

Gochenaurs Work Together

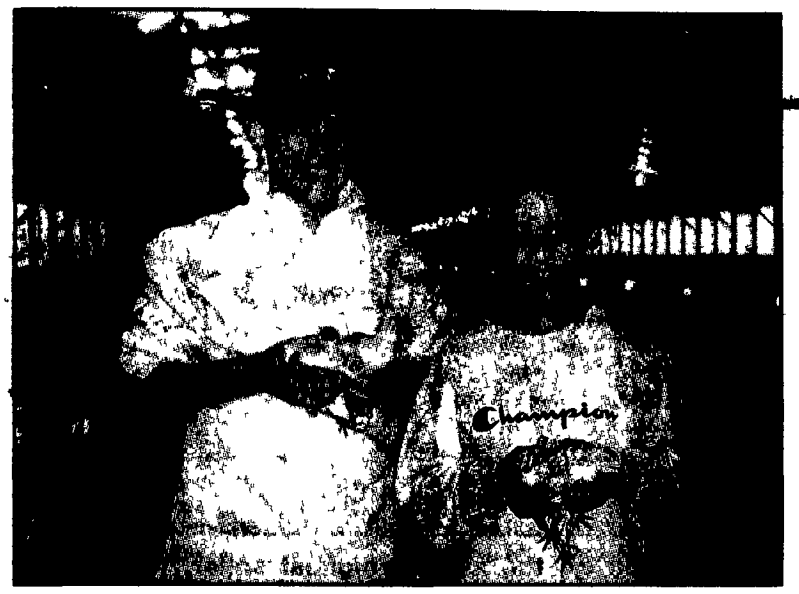
older," said Karen. Her father, in fact, comes when the Gochenaurs need a weekend off, and "he can handle the work without any problem," she said.

The turkeys provide "not as demanding of a schedule" as dairying, according to Bob. Raising birds allows the couple to home-school the two boys and have more time for the family, they said.

Family activities include involvement at the New Covenant Community Church, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, and Airville Volunteer Fire Company.

Starting "Cold Turkey"

Bob grew up on a dairy farm in Lancaster and worked for his father for several years. He took over the cows, equipment, and farm lease and continued dairying for eight years after he and Karen were married.



The boys help raise the turkeys, especially during the first week, when the work is especially labor-intensive.

The Gochenaur family includes family dog Hershey, Bob, Karen, and children Alexa, 6, Sawyer, 9, and Tanner, 13.

Karen was raised in Lititz in a rented house on a farm. "I always said I was going to marry a farmer," she said.

When the lease was no longer available the couple bought land in southern York County with the intention of building a dairy, however after they considered the cash flow situation they began to investigate the opportunity of raising turkeys.

Eventually they had three barns — a brooder and two finishing barns, each 50 foot by 600 feet, constructed on the farm.

Since raising turkeys was a dramatic switch from dairy farming, consulting with industry experts and learning from the service representative helped to shorten the learning curve.

"We did it cold turkey," laughs Karen, who remembers taking notes about raising turkeys to help make the change.

Arrival Of The Poults

Even before the poults arrive, the barn must be prepared with a tractor trailer load of shavings on the floor, giving the poults a three-inch cushion, before the birds enter the facility.

(Turn to Page A38)

This young poult is just the right size for Alexa, 6.

The Gochenaurs get 18,000 poults four times a year on their York County farm.

If it works on one thing, it might not work on another.

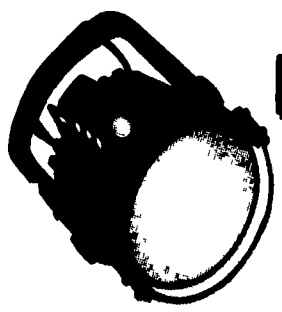
J&J Agri-Products Repeating At The Farm Show



Farm Show 2003 Exhibitor Spotlight

Exclusive to Lancaster Farming

DILLSBURG (York Co.) — "We've been going to the Farm Show since the late '70s," said Bunk Smith, sales representative, J&J Agri-Products & Services, Inc.

"We have strongly supported the Pennsylvania Farm Show," he said. "I think it's a really good show in that consumers can come and see what the farmer does. It's good interaction — it promotes understanding.

"Farmers have a lot of stress and tragedy. People have no idea what it takes to make a glass of milk," he said.

"If the consumers aren't here, farmers aren't going to be in business. Each week we want them to go to the store and buy milk and eggs," he said.

"We have the number one industry in the state," and the Farm Show offers a showcase opportunity, he said. "People are curious about the way things are grown, and the Farm Show is an ideal way to show them," he said.

In addition to the education of consumers, "there's probably not one show in the nation that probably does more than the Pennsylvania Farm Show does for youth," said Smith, noting the scholarships and livestock sale that supports youth activities.

Another benefit is the revenue opportunity offered to commodity groups that sell their wares in the food court.

The dinner event — this year it will be "Agro 2003" — that draws foreign visitors, conducted each year during the Farm Show, is "very good for Pennsylvania agriculture, to expand export opportunities," he said.

"With the new buildings, this year's going to be very different than most years. A lot of people came back because of the equipment."

Besides the return of the equipment, Smith credits the work of agriculture secretary Sam Hayes as key to getting money for, and thus revitalizing interest in, the Farm Show.

"The Farm Show has always been good to us. We don't always make sales during the show, but they (customers) may call later.

"Where else can I go and see 300,000 people, and a lot of people out of state?"

J&J Agri-Products ships product not only interstate but also internationally.

Not only the farming community but also home gardeners or greenhouse representatives will also see the business' stand, said Smith.

An organic fish product (a fertilizer), animal health care products, calf hutches, and gates are items that the business offers. They also sell manure pit deodorizers and an all-natural colostrum product. Soil testing and nutrition management consultation are also a part of the business.

Jim and Jane McHale founded the business 28 years ago. Jim, a former secretary of agriculture, and Jane, the first female deputy secretary, a state representative, and on the board of directors for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, began the business 28 years ago.

After Jim passed away, Jane, now Jane Alexander, works as an attorney and operates a beef farm in York Springs.

Their son, Marstin, now oversees international sales. Staff also includes Joyce Stucky, office manager. The business employs eight people in busy times (January through August) and four in the winter season.

"I'm looking forward to being there," said Smith, who has planned to make a few changes to the business' stand. One item on display will be the board of pictures of community fair entries and ribbons obtained by their customers at several fairs.

Millard "Bunk" Smith holds one of the calendars that J&J Agri-Products will be giving away during the Farm Show.

that in the long run it would ruin the county.

When our next-door neighbor to the west wanted to build a big new pole shed, our township sent out a notice inviting comments from property owners. He didn't complain. Neither did we. We were glad to hear that our neighbor had hay and straw to store and was doing well enough to have equipment to keep under cover.

Now a neighbor to the south wants to split 21 acres into five building lots. We have a big problem with that. So does the township. Runoff from his land already floods part of our farm and coats the nearest road with ice in winter. The sand mound septic systems he proposes would be at the headwaters of a sensitive watershed. He may get just three lots, and then only by building a big retention pond.

That neighbor is not happy about it, but he's not complaining to the legislature. The needs of the community outweigh his urge to get rich quick.

The last thing we need is a bill such as SB 1413 that seems to set farmers above the law. Consumers — taxpayers — already have a pretty low opinion of American agriculture.

Never mind that Americans now spend less on food than any people in the world. Many Americans already believe that farmers are getting rich off of federal commodity programs, disaster payments, and breaks not available to other businesses.

"Who needs farmers?" taxpayers say. "We can get food from foreign countries."

Do we want to encourage that terribly wrong and dangerous thinking? Of course not. But that is exactly what we do when we promote legislation that tells local communities farmers are not bound by the same rules as everyone else.

Increased overproduction does not help farmers. It drives market prices even lower, forcing more farmers out of business.

"There is a perpetual surplus of corn, and tobacco, and wheat, and cotton, and all other products of the field. It is sold at low prices, yielding little to the producer, while destroying the man with whom it comes in competition," John Stuart Skinner wrote in "The Plough, The Loom and The Anvil" — in 1848!

Today, proof of that is as close as the market reports elsewhere in this section of Lancaster Farming.

We farmers need to find new — more profitable — ways to sell what we produce.

That's why my wife and I recently joined Slow Food. At our first Slow Food dinner in Philadelphia, we sat with two caterers. When they found out we were farmers they practically mugged us for our business cards. Bam! Instant return on investment.

By being good citizens, we can meet the huge, local demand for the products of Pennsylvania agriculture and maybe even fulfill Skinner's vision of farming's future.

"With the highest civilization, the producer will stand, as he deserves to do, at the top of the list, and the manufacturer will stand second, while the merchant will be the last, as the trade of the soldier will then have ceased to exist."

Editor:

Perhaps it's time for a change of name for your paper. Maybe you should consider a new title that will better describe the apparent leaning of the editorial staff. How about "Lancaster Suburbanite and Animal Rights Review?"

After the publishing of the Oct. 26 editorial by Brian Snyder opposed to the passage of SB 1413 and championing the advancement of urban sprawl by a call to inaction, the "Lancaster Suburbanite" part of the title seems more appropriate than "Lancaster Farming." After all, SB 1413 has been authored to protect the future of Pennsylvania's number one industry from the adoption of illegal ordinances passed by local governments through ignorance and lack of understanding about the realities of production agriculture on the part of nonfarming citizens.

Sadly, too many of our nonfarming neighbors who have chosen to move into a rural setting next to that picturesque farm have a Disney storybook, "Old MacDonald" view of agriculture. So, when "Babe" turns out to not smell as sweet as he looks, and "Clairabell" bawls all night for her newly separated calf, generates some flies, or finds a hole in the fence, tempers begin to rise. And if "Johny tractor" turns out to be rather loud and kicks up a dust cloud as he plows that lovely cornfield next door, the idealistic dream about country life is suddenly not so rosy and the complaints start flowing despite "Old MacDonald's" best efforts to make peace with his disgruntled suburbanite neighbors.

But according to your editorial advice, poor old Mac's best action is to just roll over and let his new neighbors dictate him out of livelihood and home because they've found what he's always done an inconvenience to their ideal. It's not like "Mac" picked up his operation and decided to plunk it down in downtown Pittsburgh, Philly, or Harrisburg; remember they choose to relocate in the country, knowing that operating farms preexisted their moving in.

I agree with Mr. Snyder that farmers should not be purposely obnoxious toward our nonfarming neighbors or have an "in-your-face" attitude when disagreements arise. However, we should stand up for our legitimate right to provide the agricultural commodities our society needs to function and should be afforded the commonsense protections SB 1413 allow us.

Now for the second part of the new name, "Animal Rights Review," with the publishing of the Nov. 9 letter to the editor concerning the tragic plight of, but not limited to, our great state's worm population along our highways. I believe this title might just fit. Perhaps you should consider sending a free bumper sticker to each of your subscribers that reads "Warning — I Break for Worms!" The real tragedy is that you readily printed such an "educational" letter but not one to educate your readership concerning the terrible carnage being rent against our state's unborn children or mentioning the position of our recent gubernatorial candidates concerning abortion. The topic of abortion may be an offensive one to some of your readers but so are visions of splattered toads, bunnies, or "several individuals" dying nearly every mile. (I had to read that line twice as at first I thought it concerned people.)

Editor:

You and your staff are to be congratulated for hosting a lively and genuine discussion in recent weeks regarding Senate Bill 1413. I appreciate your willingness to print my editorial, as well as the opposing opinions that have come in response.

The discussion taking place on the editorial page of your paper is beginning to resemble the statewide dialogue that should be occurring on behalf of farmers all across Pennsylvania who are facing immeasurable odds these days. Senator Wenger warns readers to watch out for groups who would split the agricultural community. The fact is, such differences of opinion have existed for a long time, but are now coming to the surface in a meaningful way.

Let's all look forward to the free and open discussion that might come after the conclusion of this vigorous debate over a bill that serves the needs of special interests more than it does rank-and-file Pennsylvania farmers.

STARLINGS, MICE AND RATS ARE PESTS, TOO!

Del Voight
Regional Pest Management Agent

Many people don't consider that pest management includes other pests besides insects, weeds, and disease. Pests such as deer, mice, rats, and even lice are overlooked as pests and that they too should be managed using an integrated pest management (IPM) approach.

Under this system of management, as in field crops, the pest is monitored to determine populations. The estimated cost of control is measured against the economic impact of the damage that may occur from the pest. After the likelihood that a benefit will be realized does a treatment or action be taken to eliminate or reduce the population to a manageable level.

This article will brief some IPM strategies for starlings, mice, and rats, all of which may be nuisances, spread disease (such as salmonella), and consume large amounts of feed targeted to livestock.

Mild winters and the lack of enough predators along with ample food sources on farms have caused widespread growth of starling populations. A survey conducted by Jason Suckow of the U.S. wildlife service in cooperation with Paul Craig and other extension agents found that of the 155 respondents from 22 counties, 57 percent rated problems with birds as severe or very severe. Starlings were the #1 pest — 94 percent.

Here is some general biological information known about the pest. They are cavity nesters (trees and buildings) and will compete for these sites. Each female will lay 4 to 7 eggs that hatch in 11 to 13 days, and the new hatchlings will fledge at 21 days of age and then provide a second nesting. They will consume 50 percent (at 3.5 ounces) of their body weight.

For an example of how this can create problems, let's look at one farm with a population ranging from 500 to more than 1,000 starlings. This equates to about 100 to 200 pounds of that farm's feed lost per day! I might add that the birds tend to eat the best feed. If the feed lost was corn, for example, you can calculate the loss. One hundred pounds of corn would be worth about $4, and at 200 pounds would be $8 lost per day or $1,460 to $3,000 dollars lost per year from a moderate population of birds.

Does it pay to take care of this pest? There are estimates on some farms of more than a million birds — an obvious problem. Analyze your own farm and do the math to find out how much you might be losing.

Since starlings can exist on many farms, what can be done to alleviate the problem? Exclusion, cultural and habitat modification, frightening, repellents, toxicants, trapping, and shooting are ways to eliminate the birds, and each are effective, depending on the operation and the extent of the problem. To determine which is best for your farm, Jason Suckow is available to answer those questions and can be reached at (717) 728-0400. There are also licensed-for-hire control specialists that may assist you in managing the bird populations. A fact sheet discussing the issue of nuisances birds is available at your local extension office.

As many of you know, Starlicide Complete was once again labeled in Pennsylvania for bird control. This product is only as effective as the producer is dedicated and understands how to use the product and properly prebait the birds. Winter is the best time to eliminate populations. Plan now to be ready for the mid-winter control measures that will need to be taken.

Rats and mice also are nuisances on farms. Here are some interesting tidbits of information presented by Paul Craig at a recent crops day event. In a sample of 1,000 grain samples, 76 percent contained rodent droppings and hair contaminants. One mouse produced 36,000 droppings per year and one rat produced 25,000 droppings per year. A rat eats 30 to 40 pounds of food per year and contaminates 10 times as much, not to mention structural damage which mice are especially known for doing on farms.

Important biological information known about rats and mice helps in determining management systems. Mice are mainly nocturnal. With limited daytime activity, they have poor eyesight, rely on smell, taste and touch, and are colorblind. The life span of a mouse is 12 to 15 months and their home range is only from 9 to 30 feet. Sexually mature at 45 days, they will rear a litter size of 3 to 11 born 19 to 21 days after mating and will have 5 to 11 litters per year.

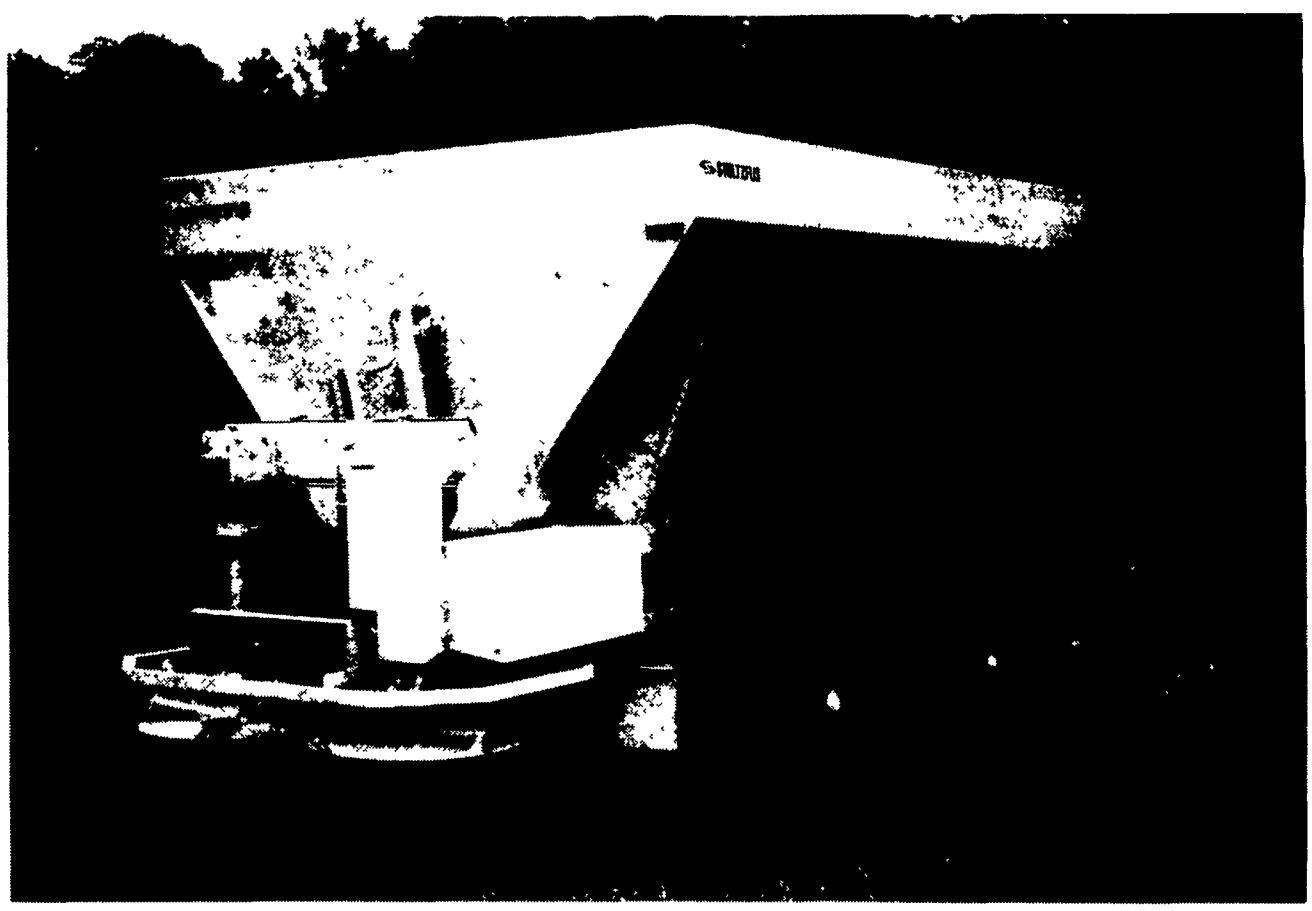
Rats, on the other hand, have been known to be active during the day at high populations. In addition, rats grow larger and will live in an area of 20 to 300 feet — a much larger range than the mouse. Sexually mature at 90 days, rats will raise 8 to 10 young per litter and have 4 to 12 litters per year. They differ from mice in that they are much more sensitive to objects (like a bait station) in their environment and can detect even the smallest amount of poison in baits.

Aside from the logic of cleanliness on the farm and control of weeds and debris (this also includes junk) around the buildings, one should monitor populations. To monitor populations it is suggested to build bait stations free of poison or bait and traps that would be checked on a regular basis to determine whether a full-scale control program is needed. If the presence of many mice and rats are noted, then begin a control program. A tube measuring 2 inches in diameter leading into a covered box placed near shelter and travel routes allows for only the mice and rats to enter and keeps cats out. Too short of baiting periods, insufficient bait and replenishment, too few bait stations, too far apart (mice — 6 feet apart), too small an area treated, too many easily obtained food sources available, tainted baits (wear rubber gloves), are all reasons for failure in the baiting procedure.

Extension offices have fact sheets detailing the proper management of rodent populations. Call Extension for more information. There also are many specialists available that, for a fee, will monitor and treat rodents on farms.

By monitoring pest populations to avoid population explosions and by calculating the relative cost of control versus the loss of feed, a producer will soon find that managing both nuisance birds and rodents makes economic sense.

It's Time To Lime!



The Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreader is likely the most powerful spreader of its kind on the market today. You see, we've been building them since 1945, and farmers are still using Stoltzfus Wet Lime Spreaders they've had for 20, even 30 years. Our special drag chain is 4 times stronger than stainless steel, and handles frozen and heavy stockpiled lime with ease. Plus for spreading compost, composted sludge, poultry litter and certain fertilizers, the WLS is without equal for sheer volume spreading. We call that performance. You'll call it terrific.

We hope you compare a Stoltzfus WLS with other spreaders. It makes us look even better. Price? Sure we may be a little more. But when you end up replacing cheaper units in a few short years, what have you saved? Stoltzfus quality always pays for itself many times over.

Just how tough is a Stoltzfus WLS? Plenty tough. Call today. We'll tell you where to find the dealer nearest you, and send you free literature to inspect.

Farm Bureau Meets To Discuss Policy, Recognize Members

tive attended Tuesday evening's member recognition banquet.

During the evening Sam Hayes, agriculture secretary, congratulated the legislators for a job well done. "I really do believe that this is as good a legislature as I can recall since I first came to Harrisburg," he said.

He commented on "all that you've done for agriculture," such as the water legislation and right to farm measures that have recently been advanced.

This year, Milford Kinsman received the Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award.

As he accepted the award, Kinsman read a poem he had written that detailed his PFB invovlement over the years. "The best part of it all was meeting so many people, and making so many friends," he said.

Kinsman's agriculture career began with working on a dairy farm in 1943. He joined the Pennsylvania Farmers Association (now the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau) in 1958 and served in several capacities on county and state levels, including as county president and on legislative committees.

He serves on the county board of directors and legislative committee. Kinsman also served on the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau state board of directors from 1994 to 2001.

Kinsman worked to help get a number of beneficial agricultural bills passed and helped to defeat a few unfavorable bills.

He has been married to his wife, Shirley, for 53 years.

The four finalists in the Young Farmer and Rancher Discussion Meet were Wendy Freed, Michael Braucher, Shelly DeHoff, and Caressa Crone.

Crone, Danville, Northumberland County, won the expense-paid trip to Tampa, Fla., where she will compete in the National Discussion Meet.

"I did this as a personal goal," said Crone. This year marked her first PFB convention and "has given me lots of inspiration to do more in my county,"she said.

The most prestigious award for a county is the All-Star Award, this year given to Lehigh County, which also won the award last year. Lehigh County Farm Bureau represents 703 member families. President Brian Deitrich accepted the award. A county must excel in nearly all 19 program categories to qualify for the award.

A new award, which recognizes young farmers and ranchers who are active in Farm Bureau and agriculture, yet receive the majority of their income off the farm, was also introduced. This year Gene and Crystal Smithmyer, Patton, Cambria County, received the Young Farmer and Rancher Excellence in Agriculture Award.

Gene is employed full-time on his father's potato farm and Crystal is an outreach specialist with AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians, which helps farmers with disabilities to continue farming

Michael and Michele Hawbaker of Shade Gap, Huntingdon County received the Young Farmer and Rancher Achievement Award. The award honors a farmer or farm couple who have demonstrated outstanding farm business and leadership achievements. The Hawbakers' operate a 100-cow registered Holstein dairy farm. Michael serves on the boards of the Huntingdon County Farm Bureau and the Huntingdon County Conservation District.

Also during the week, producers who attended the conference learned about how to help keep U.S. agriculture safe from disease outbreak from Brian Haaser, Special Agent in Charge, USDA office of inspector general, Mid-Atlantic region. Haaser offered recommendations in a "Bioterrorism" session.

Haaser suggested farmers could report any signs of disease immediately to local, state or federal veterinarians and appropriate officials.

To conclude the meeting, members elected leaders and adopted policies on a wide range of issues.

Voting delegates re-elected Guy Donaldson, Ortanna, as president.

Donaldson, an Adams County fruit farmer, has served as president since April, 1996.

Delegates also filled eight vacancies on the farm organization's board of directors.

Milk Prices Puzzle Dairy Farmers

ing a tough economy are paying more for milk and dairy products than the ingredient costs would suggest they should."

For example, between June and August 2002, retail prices for ice cream rose 1.4 percent. But, Bailey said, the modest increase was added to prices already elevated due to rapidly rising butterfat prices in 2001. But butterfat prices this year are down 50 percent from last year.

"One would expect ice cream prices to have fallen back to their pre-2001 levels," Bailey said. "That did not occur. The same also is true for natural cheese: its price is up 6.7 percent through August, while protein, the main ingredient in cheese production, fell in value this year. Cheese processors June through August paid farmers 14.6 percent less than a year ago, yet retail prices rose."

Bottled whole milk prices for major U.S. urban markets actually fell 5.7 percent between June and August when compared to the same months a year ago. On the other hand, lower federally regulated fluid prices meant processors paid farmers 30 percent less for milk used for bottling purposes.

Someone is keeping this difference, Bailey concedes, but consumers and producers wondering about price discrepancies should know that many factors play into the scenario.

"First, many ice cream processors saw their margins squeezed in 2001 because they could not fully pass along all of their costs," he said. "Also, retail milk prices haven't always gone up as high as the increase in raw milk costs (Class I prices) when milk prices are rising, and they don't go down as fast when milk prices are plummeting. Also, the federal retail price data may not account for sales discounts that are so common today in retail."

Bailey cites USDA data for the first eight months of 2002 indicating that strong milk production and weak demand have lead to unusually large butter and cheese inventory levels that could "hang over" the market next year, depressing future prices for butter and cheese. In addition, the federal government currently has 1.1 billion pounds of nonfat dry milk in storage, more than enough to meet domestic needs for an entire year.

The outlook for the holiday shopping season clearly is uncertain. While the economy has consumers cautious, Bailey points to automotive and computer manufacturing as industries that have found creative ways to deal with tough economic conditions and consumer reluctance.

"Dairy retailers have a rare opportunity to offer quality dairy products to their customers at favorable prices," he said. "Wholesale prices for milk, butter and cheese are very low, and that should translate into opportunities to offer these products to consumers at reduced prices, employ sales promotions and use other strategies to give the consumer a better deal.

"Strong holiday sales this last quarter could do wonders for the U.S. dairy industry, mainly by reducing inventory levels and allowing the market to jumpstart into a new year," Bailey said.

Manheim Cattle Feeder Discusses Industry Trends

direction than dairy, so we went into beef and hogs," said Kettering. By that time, his father had moved from full-time dairying to selling dry cows and heifers.

It was the experience he gained buying and selling cattle, said Kettering that gave him experience and the confidence to begin feeding beef cattle.

He began buying 700-900-pound cattle — mostly Black Angus and Charolais crossbred calves, which he considered the most efficient feeders — and finishing them.

Also in 1970 he started a 60-sow farrow-to-finish operation. He now markets 5,000 head of hogs a year on the strictly finishing operation.

Although he had agricultural experience, he also opted to "read as much as I could about what I was doing," he said, besides consulting people experienced in the beef industry.

After starting with 100 head of steers, he now feeds out 225 at a time at two locations, equaling about 350-400 head per year.

Cattle Health

The 700-800 pound new cattle come to the home farm to be turned out on pasture until they reach 950-1,000 pounds.

Kettering feeds a mixture of corn silage, high moisture ground ear corn, and sometimes hay to these younger cattle.

When they are taken to a nearby farm to be finished.

"With fresh air and grass they start better for me," he said. "Since most of the calves are from Virginia or West Virginia, they're used to running outside." Kettering prefers cattle straight off the farm, rather than auction cattle because of risk of illness.

He also prefers that the cattle are single- or double-vaccinated.

"Years ago, they weren't vaccinating and weren't implanting, and you just basically took a chance," he said. Now shipping fever and pneumonia, though not eliminated, are not as much of a problem as in the past, said Kettering.

One key change in the industry is, however, not only the growing prevalence of immunizations and implants but also the availability of the calves' health history.

"I try and find out the health program, including implants," he said, noting that the information is usually available. "I pretty well know if the guy is up on his health program."

Kettering buys his cattle from an order buyer, who can get the information listed, for example, in the tel-o auctions or from other reliable sources.

The cattle are implanted and wormed at the buying station just before they come to the farm, and "that is enough to see them through until they are marketed," he said. "The worming and implants help the animal become more efficient in feed conversion" — it takes fewer pounds of feed to gain pounds of beef — "and that's the name of the game, efficiency."

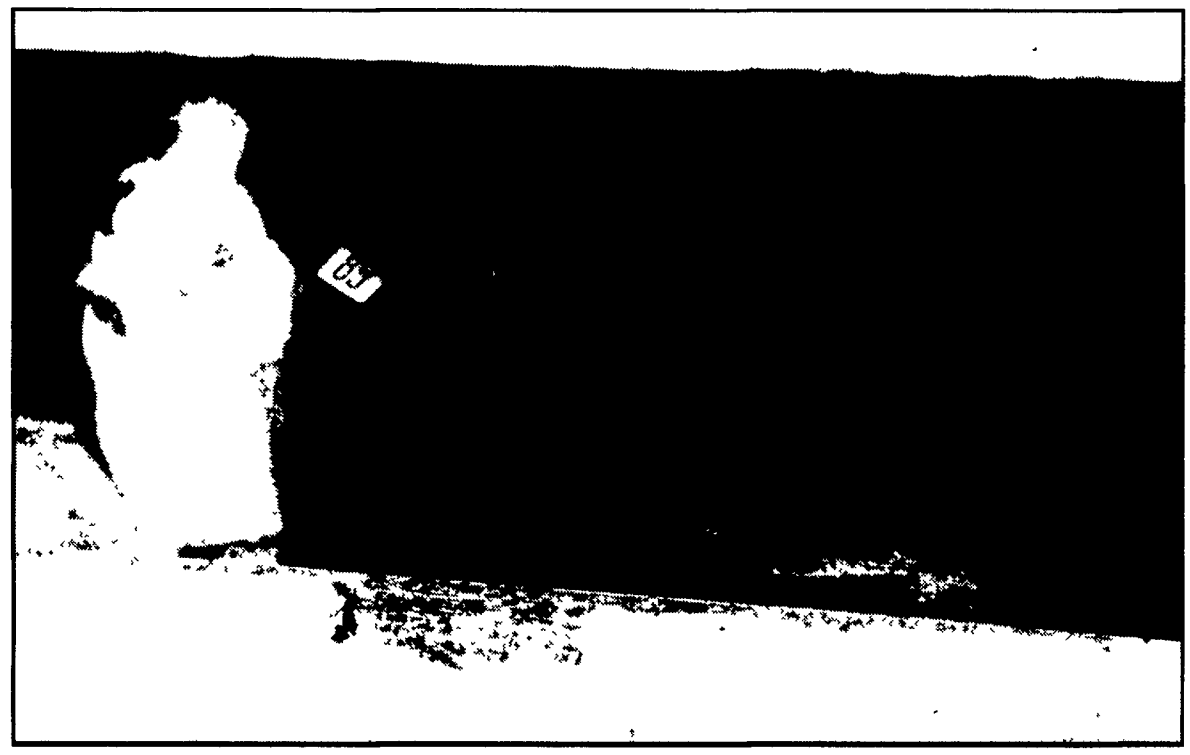
Change In Cattle

Besides changing health management programs, Kettering has noticed the change in cattle. "Everybody wants black cattle," he said, pointing out that packers need black cattle to fill the certified Angus beef program.

In keeping with demand, he feeds mostly Angus, with a few red and Charolais crossbred cattle. Many of the high quality, high Choice and Prime cattle go to kosher slaughterhouses in New York and Baltimore.

"I like quality. When I sent them direct, as long as they graded Choice, it didn't matter what they looked like. Now, with going to auctions, a better quality steer will bring more.

"We have gotten away from what I call racehorses. We've come back to moderately-framed cattle, which have smaller carcasses with better marbling characteristics "than what we had 10 years ago," he said.



The cattle are mostly black Angus or Hereford or Charolais crossbreds.

The packer, too, favors smaller animals "because they're going to boxed beef and large-framed cattle do not fit into the boxes.

"The demand for carcass weights of less than 950 pounds makes my job harder," he said, because the cattle must be marketed in a tighter time frame. "I'm feeding a hotter ration, so they finish quicker," he said. Although the ration is more expensive, the cattle spend less days on feed.

Marketing has also changed. Although he used to go to the packing plant, he now sends the cattle to the sale barn. "When you go direct, you're basically responsible" for the size of the steer, as well as the cattle being overfinished or underfinished.

"The last two years they (the cattle) have all been going to the auction," he said.

"Nowadays you've got to be on top of it. If the steers gets too large, you're going to get docked.

"Today, a liveweight of 1,500-1,600 pounds is undesirable, when 10 years ago it didn't matter."

Consequently, "I won't buy large-framed or exotic crossbred animals anymore," he said. "In my feeding program, they're going to get too big."

When the cattle are moved from the home farm, they are given silage, 20 pounds of shelled corn, and eight pounds of dry shelled corn and barley mixed, plus minerals.

Manheim Cattle Feeder Discusses Industry Trends

Diversity Key

Diversification — steers, hogs, and some cash cropping — has proved to be the key to the farm's profitability, since the markets balance each other out, said Kettering.

Although larger feedlots will be the main competitors in the beef business of the future, "there is a place for smaller feedlots," said Kettering.

Selling quarters and halves directly, is a possibility, along with niche markets such as organic food.

"There is a market, but it takes work," said Kettering.

Other options, such as forward contracting or hedging cattle, are tools the small producer can use to stay in business, he said.

Since Kettering is not considering expanding, he also markets his cattle directly, retail, for greater profitability. Word-of-mouth advertising has helped him to sell halves and quarters of beef to area consumers. He has used this outlet for beef for 20 years. Lately he has marketed 25-30 head a year.

"In the beginning I did 10 or 15 head a year," he said. Although demand dropped for several years, "the last five years it has really been picking up again. People seem to be wanting to go back to the farm for their beef and pork." He also sells half or whole hogs.

Another option for smaller growers, he noted, would be farmers' markets, where customers can see and talk to the grower.

"These avenues are more work, but pay dividends," he said.

Kettering is joined by his wife, Jody, on the farm. The couple has three children: Jason, John, and Jill.

Herefords Compete At American Royal

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — In conjunction with the American Royal Livestock Show, Hereford history was made in Kansas City Oct. 25-27.

The historic Hereford bull, once located at the previous Hereford headquarters, rose again in Mulkey Park and now redecorates the Kansas City skyline.

In the first combined National Hereford show, 169 head of Hereford cattle entered the show ring Oct. 27.

Jarold Callahan, Yukon, Okla., commented on the depth of cattle exhibited before him and was complementary of the combined efforts of horned and polled exhibitors.

"Combining the shows has not handicapped either side. The deserving cattle will sort themselves to the top regardless of horn classification," said Callahan.

Beef Board Chairman Delivers Message To Dairy Producers

MADISON, Wis. — Cattlemen's Beef Board Chairman Dee Lacey told dairy producers at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis., recently that they play an important role in the beef checkoff, as beef from dairy animals represent a significant part of the beef industry.

"When that dairy cow is no longer productive in the milking parlor, she is productive in the beef industry," said Lacey, a beef producer from Paso Robles, Calif. "Close to 20 percent of our beef supply is from dairy breeds. And new convenient beef products, which are sometimes further processed, use a lot of beef from dairy cows."

In the beginning, Cramer sold dried flowers to small retailer and crafters When the dried flower market began to sag in the late 80s and early '90s however he began to contemplate diversifications. AARON (Lancaster Co.) — Variety is the spice of life in bigger s life

Several varieties — no hundreds of varieties of produce spring in fall, in his backyard orchard each year

A Switzerland native, Habegger has been in the U.S. to 48 years but still looks back to the small farm where he grew up

Bigger Bell Peaches? Convention Examines Ways

ANDY ANDREWS

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — How does a grower produce a bigger, better peach?

Researchers noted how at the annual Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in late January at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

First, select the right tree fruit genetics — it can make a big difference, according to Dr Richard Marini tree fruit researcher at Virginia Tech Marini who provided the first-ever Ernie Christ lecturmerial Lecture in honor of a world known researcher at the conventam also noted that pruning can also improve fruit size "Trees pruned more severely have bigger fruit," said Marini

"One of the ways to get bigger fruit is to do a better job of pruning, he said "It's easier to cut off the flowers or buds with shears than to go and remove the fruit by hand

And keep water available at the right times, especially in the early stages of growth and the last stages of development

Marini pointed to research in various places, mostly in Texas, that pointed out during many conditions in season 'each tree uses about 37 gallons of water per day he said

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Tomato growers gathered here during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in late January and were rewarded for their efforts

The annual Tomato Awards Luncheon at the convention allowed growers to talk to each other and adopt yardsticks for their own operations noted James Kohl vice president of Furman Foods. This provides recognition to those high yielders

But Kohl noted that even so slowly producers are facing toward that goal of 50-tons-per-acre yield

Kohl held up the $100 bill the Ben Franklin he said, that would be, he presumed, given to the grower that reaches that average. "It's going to happen," said Kohl

Eric Charles, Lancaster came close this year, winning recognition for having a 49 22-ton-per-acre average so close 'At least I'll keep the Franklin another year' Kohl said farm, they arrive in a big way — approximately 18,000 poults come at once. The poults come from Virginia, Ohio, the Carolinas, or even Canada or California, on occasion.

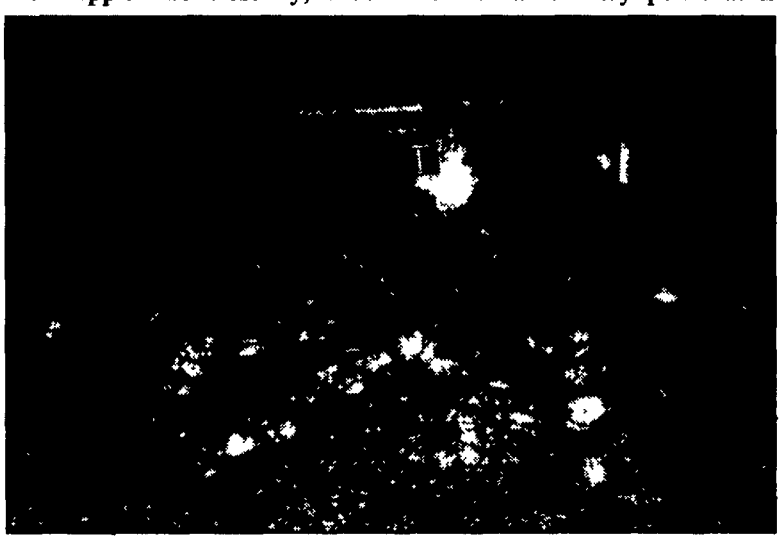
After they arrive at the farm, the day-old birds are loaded on a flatbed pickup and driven down to the barn, where they are unloaded. They snuggle in groups of 225 they are unloaded into cardboard rings — under the pancake brooder stoves which keep the temperature at a balmy 100 degrees.

A nipple line close by, with shiny water droplets to catch their eyes, and small mini cups offer water to the young birds.

Besides helping to feed calves (Karen raises 125 calves a year for a nearby dairy farm), the children help out, "especially in the first week. It's like a marathon around here then," said Bob.

Young poults "have a tendency to flip over on their backs and can't get back up by themselves," said Bob. "They get dehydrated if they are there too long."

Consequently the children travel through the brooder house with buckets, gathering chicks that have flipped, and taking them to a recovery pen that is equipped with a special mat offering better footing.



The poults snuggle in groups of 225 — they are unloaded into cardboard rings — under the pancake brooder stoves which keep the temperature at a balmy 100 degrees.

Nurturing the young flock also entails checking the poults every two hours for the first couple days. Even when the birds are older, Bob checks all three barns several times a day and again at the end of each day.

Also during the first week the Gochenaurs scoop the poults' feed into a wheelbarrow to put in the small feeders, which equates to hand-hauling four tons of feed.

Finishing

When the poults are approximately six weeks old, they are split into two groups and moved to the finishing barns.

This also is a family endeavor, as the children can help push the young turkeys through the corridors that lead to the other barns. "In an hour we can move a barnful," said Bob.

In the finisher barns the turkeys now drink from bell-shaped "plassons" which give them access to more water, "especially during a hot dry summer," said Karen. All three barns of turkeys may drink more than 6,000 gallons of water a day.

Feeding thousands of turkeys also requires a substantial amount of feed, since all of the birds eat fifteen tons of pellets a day.

"Typically, at their peak, when the birds are older, we can go through three tractor trailer loads a week," said Bob.

The toms are "pushing close to 40 pounds" when they leave at 20 weeks of age.

When the birds leave a crew of 8-10 people come to the farm to push the birds onto a loader, a four-foot-wide conveyor belt that takes the birds outside of the barn, where they are loaded into pens.

Health, Safety

Since keeping the young poults in top health is important, Bob hand-forks the shavings in the brooder house each day in the water and feeding areas.

This keeps the litter dry and prevents the poults from developing foot and health problems. Bob also regularly rototills the sawdust in the finisher barns for the same reason.

Since the poults need to be kept warm, and the larger birds should stay in temperatures in the 60-degree range, alarms go off to sound the alert if the climate changes too drastically.

"It's harder to regulate in the spring and fall, since the temperatures are so variable," said Karen.

In addition to temperatures, biosecurity measures are also a concern for the Gochenaurs.

"Anyone entering the farm has to sign in," said Bob. Also, the end doors are kept locked. Dip pans are inside each door, and the disinfectant is changed daily. Bob also changes into separate boots for the different barns. The barns are also screened to keep the wild birds out.

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2795	1734
LAST WEEK	2704	1626
LAST YEAR	1828	1405

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold 1 00-3 00 higher Buyers came to the auction Monday knowing the Western market had cleared 70 00 the prior week, and that the February live cattle contract at the CME was pushing hard to hit 78 00 By weeks end the cowboys in the Southern Plains were moving their fats at 71 00 on a live basis, with their Northern counterparts receiving 111 00-112.00 on a dressed basis, which is 3.00 higher This higher direct movement, coupled with the February live cattle contract closing at 78 20 on Thursday, led to local buyers digging in for a battle by weeks end One of the first steers to come through the ring on Thursday brought 72 00, which set the tone for very active trading throughout the day Buyers had two choices, either buckle down and end up with a load averaging well above 70 00, or drive home with an empty trailer. Although, most buyers chose the ladder as the holiday demand is starting to pick up, while the supply is beginning to weaken as most of the old crop feeders are already in the cooler, boxed beef values show good beef movement as well as prices continue their climb Slaughter heifers walked along the same path as their brothers as a good test at weeks end trended fully 1 00 higher Holstein steers sold with a higher undertone as well this week, with a good test of well finished steers on Thursday trading as high as 62.10 Slaughter cows sold .50 to 1.00 higher through mid-week, trending 1 00-3 00 higher by the close of the trading period due to a very good run of fleshier cows Cow trends followed the same lines as their cutout values, which were several dollars higher this week Slaughter cow runs remain very heavy, although buyers are expecting lighter runs through the holidays, therefore many plants are stockpiling supplies Thanksgiving is only a week away, and although most families will be digging in to a ham or turkey feast, many cattlemen will be able to relax a little more as they loosen their belts in front of the football game, as the current slaughter market is setting up for feeders to hit a homerun this winter This week's reported supply included 27 percent steers, 7 percent heifers, 40 percent cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders SLAUGHTER STEERS High Choice and Prime 2-4 1300-1475 lbs 71.00-73.25, fancy single 74.00, early in the week 70 50-72.00 Choice 2-3 1220-1495 lbs 69 00-71.75, early in the week 68 00-71 00, high dressing Yield Grade 1-2 and Charolais-X 70 25-74.00, Yield Grade 4 64 00-68 00, few heavyweights 1505-1610 lbs 61 00-65 25. Dairylea, DFA: Reclassify Imports

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. and the Northeast Council of Dairy Farmers of America Inc. (DFA), in support of efforts by the National Milk Producers Federation, have asked the U.S. Customs Service to take action on its consideration to reclassify certain types of dairy protein blends currently imported as milk protein concentrate (MPC).

In addition to providing comments to the Customs Service, Dairylea and DFA sent joint letters to key members of the Northeast's Congressional delegation asking them to contact the Customs Service as well. Members of the board of directors of both cooperatives and management followed up with phone calls to their Congressional representatives to further encourage their support.

True MPCs are made by ultrafiltering skim milk and then drying down the protein slush that remains. There is a significant amount of product being imported that is labeled as MPC, but which is actually a blend of nonfat dry milk and MPC. Dairylea and DFA believe that this type of product should truly come under the same tariff classification as nonfat dry milk imports, which is a more restrictive tariff level than that for MPC.

"Over the last few years, some of the largest volume increases of milk protein concentrate imports have come from these mislabeled blends," said Clyde Rutherford, president of Dairylea Cooperative. "We strongly support this change since it would result in a reduced number of MPC imports and an increased demand for domestically produced nonfat dry milk."

SOIL QUALITY

Mena Hautau
Berks County
Cooperative Extension

Last month, this column addressed soil fertility needs through soil testing. This month, soil quality will be covered.

In my experience, there are several groups of farmers who are very interested in the quality of their soil: farmers who use the no-till method of tillage, high-value vegetable or crop producers, organic farmers, and animal producers who use highly managed pastures to produce quality forage.

Another term used is soil health. Farmers also may describe soils as "alive" or "dead." These farmers all share an understanding that they can consciously use various techniques to improve the soil. However, there is a need for all farmers, especially new farmers, to value soil to ensure the sustainability of the farm.

Good soil quality is characterized by soils having good structure, permeability, and organic matter. Structure is used to describe a soil that is chunky and intact, not powder-like when broken apart. There may be evidence of earthworm holes, roots, and pieces of dead plant tissue in the soil clod.

Permeability is the term used to describe how easily rainwater moves through soil. When rain falls, the soil acts as a sponge and water is readily captured, rather than running off the field or pooling. Organic matter is the portion of the soil that contains the decomposed plant tissue, fresh plant tissue, and the microorganisms. It acts as the glue to hold the soil particles together, provides food for the microorganisms, and holds nutrients.

The most important farming techniques used to improve structure and permeability are to reduce tillage and to prevent compaction of the soil. This may be easier said than done, especially in vegetable or organic farming where the farmer is using tillage. In these cases, the farmer will substitute some other practice that can help offset tillage. This may include the use of cover crops which contributes a lot of plant mass (called "biomass"), rotation with a dense rooted hay crop, compost, manure, or using wherever possible tillage equipment that leaves plant matter on top of the soil (called "plant residue").

Soil compaction happens when too much weight is put on soil, causing compression of the soil. The natural air spaces are reduced, preventing oxygen in the soil. Oxygen is vital to the living soil microorganisms and plant roots. Farming practices that can help to prevent soil compaction include keeping tillage implements, farm equipment, or animals out of wet fields, establishing traffic lanes for equipment or livestock, preventing the use of very heavy equipment, and using low tire pressure on farm equipment.

Building soil quality is a long-term process. Soil does not respond to quick fixes such as overloading the soil with compost, adding magic potions, or excessive fertilizer. Farmers look for indicators that their soils are increasing in quality over time. They may include a gradual increase of soil organic matter, a darker color, greater soil biological life, leafy smelling odor, better fertility, or reduced erosion. They also understand the inherent physical properties of the soil and work with its limitations. Overall, they share a deep respect for this resource and intentionally use good practices to improve it for generations to come.

"We were going to install an NRCS-designed concrete tank on our farm, but when we looked at the Slurrystore System as an alternative, we knew what would work best on our farm."

"We were bedding with sand until we looked at Slurrystore Systems using wet limestone-and we were convinced. Sand is a great bedding, but a nuisance. Wet limestone also makes great bedding and enhances the pH of our soils."

"Our 92'x14' Slurrystore is expandable to 28' high. We couldn't do that with the other system."

"The agitation system we purchased with our Slurrystore will handle wet limestone-we saw it work."

"The layout specialists at Penn Jersey have a lot of experience to share and were a big help in designing our system."

Thanksgiving Is More Than A Holiday For Nolt Family

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

Thanksgiving Day will be much different for the Nolt family than last year's when Abigail teetered on the brink of death. This year the 14-month-old is the picture of complete health. Her parents, Julia and Rich, and brother Caleb, 3, are thrilled with Abigail's amazing recovery.

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — As Thanksgiving Day nears, Rich and Julia Nolt cannot help but compare it with last year — and give thanks.

Their 14-month-old daughter Abigail enthusiastically rushes from room to room, thrilled with the opportunity to explore. The eyes of both parents follow her, and once again the couple express their awe that God has so completely healed her.

The Nolts first became aware that something was wrong with Abigail during a routine ultrasound when Julia was 20 weeks pregnant with her.

Doctors diagnosed the unusual pockets of fluid in the intestines as a blockage. They surmised that surgery shortly after her birth could correct the problem.

Abigail was born Aug. 24, 2001 weighing 9 pounds 3 ounces, but after the excess fluid was extracted, her real weight was calculated at 7 pounds 7 ounces.

With a full head of dark hair and chubby cheeks, Abigail appeared to be superbly healthy baby, but that was only a facade.

Tests showed no blockage in her intestines, but something was drastically wrong. Her little stomach became extended by excess fluid and she could not tolerate liquid. Tubes, machines, and a central line were inserted to enable Abigail to be fed directly into her blood stream.

For the first five weeks tests, biopsies, and examinations filled Abigail's days. Prayers for her health were plead by family, friends, and churches. One by one possible diagnoses were ruled out.

Doctors were puzzled. Some days Abigail's health seemed to be on the mend, such as the first time she was fed 2½-ounces of Pedialyte when she was two weeks old. On the 18th day, her intestines started to function sluggishly, and the Nolts were filled with optimism. Doctors even started talking of sending Abigail home.

In preparation, her parents learned to calculate vials and operate the apparatus needed to feed her, but on the 23rd day, Abigail was not interested in eating, her abdomen became grossly distended — signals of something gone badly awry.

A rectal tube was put back in and antibodies were used to treat a bacterial overgrowth in Abigail's intestines. By the 26th day, Abigail was throwing up and despite doctor's best efforts, dehydration set in.

X-rays showed that Abigail's intestines had stopped functioning completely.

Abigail rushes from place to place in her eagerness to explore her world.

Doctors considered Abigail's case a mystery and a very difficult case.

"Her life was on hold," her mother recalls of that time. By the 28th day, Abigail's abdomen was extremely distended with veins protruding. A tube was inserted in her nose again to suction fluid from her stomach.

Tears streamed down her mother's face as she watched Abigail fight for her life. But Abigail wasn't her only concern. The couple's son Caleb, 25 months old, was most often in the care of grandparents. The parents wanted to be with him also. Rich, a school teacher, started his third year of teaching three days after Abigail's birth.

Church members assisted in providing transportation for Julia to Hershey Medical Center. Each day after teaching, Rich hurried to the hospital. Church friends often provided a dinner for the couple to eat at the hospital.

Doctors finally diagnosed Abigail with intestinal pseudo-obstruction, a very rare disorder. Only 10 percent of the cases are resolved. An intestinal transplant seemed imperative, but first they had to get Abigail healthy and at a 23 pound weight.

When she was one month old, her skin turned ash colored and her heart rate was rapid. Doctors feared spinal meningitis from an infection. Abigail was bruised and hurting from the constant intravenous injections and blood testings.

About that time the Nolts had what they call "a little miracle." Abigail quickly recovered from the infection, and again they started feeding her orally little by little.

Abigail came home at almost five weeks of age. She needed to be fed by the central line 20 hours every day. A backpack carrying fluid, and the programed pump was attached to her at all times. Abigail was only home 12 days, when infection again attached her system.

Doctors considered this would be a pattern, and began the process of trying to plan for an intestinal transplant.

Abigail recovered from the infection. Cautiously the doctor's began small oral feedings — of less than an ounce every four hours.

Abigail gulped it down and wanted more. She was so hungry, she cried a lot. But doctors were cautious. If they fed her too much too quickly, she could have a relapse.

"I became obsessed with measuring her abdomen girth at every diaper change," her mother said of the method used to determine whether or not Abigail was filling up with fluid.

Julia asked her church friends to pray that she would not be filled with so much anxiety.

"We learned to take a day at a time," Julia said.

Then it happened again. Another obstruction at two months old and a return to hospitalization. After the infection was cleared, feeding began even more slowly this time. Only one-sixth of an ounce every four hours. Abigail was famished.

Doctors said that was a good sign. That it showed things were moving faster through her intestines.

"We heard of children going to school with backpacks on for feeding. We were trying to prepare for the reality that it might happen to Abigail," Julie said.

Another obstacle faced the Nolts. Abigail was diagnosed as having delayed development. At 3-4 months she lay still, unlike a typical infant who would be kicking and waving arms.

In retrospect, the Nolts say that Abigail's inactivity was probably a blessing. If she had been physically active, it would have been difficult to keep the tube attached to the backpack.

Even so, the central feeding line tore in the hospital, and blood spurted out. The nurse showed Julie what to do if it happened at home. It was a good thing she did, because the next morning it did happen at home.

The chaos of stopping the blood flow and rushing to the emergency room was stressful, but even in that, Julia said, there were things to be thankful about. She was thankful it happened on a Saturday when Rich was home to dial 911 while she stopped the blood flow.

On Nov. 25, 2001, Abigail was three months old. That was the day, the church held an anointing service for her. The Nolts' Mennonite faith believes that according to the biblical passage James 5:14-15, that the sick should be anointed with oil by the elders of the church and the prayer of faith will heal them.

After the anointing service, Abigail never suffered from another obstruction. Her progress to complete oral feeding was slow but steady. A routine checkup at Christmas showed that two blood clots had developed near her heart from side effects of being hooked up to a central feeding line.

Although the clots caused some apprehension, Abigail was given blood thinner, and doctors decided the clots did not cause imminent danger.

Slowly Abigail's oral feedings increased until the central line could be removed on April 8.

"We had lots of miracles," Julie said. "Today Abigail can eat anything."

At eight months of age, Abigail began catching up in development. By 10 months, tests showed she was within her development range. She was walking at 12 months and is considered to have higher than average verbal skills.

Now at 14 months, Abigail's daddy gives her a hug and says, "She's only 14 months old. It seems likes its been much longer since all we went through."

Doctors can't explain what caused Abigail's problem or what made her get better.

"We have lots to be thankful for," Rich said, "God worked in some way to bring her to this point. It doesn't matter whether she was one of the 10 percent of the cases that resolves itself or if it was an outright miracle. When doctors gave us the 10 percent chance, it didn't seem like much of a margin. So we realize how much we have to be thankful for."

Thanksgiving Day for the Nolts will be celebrated with relatives on both sides of the family.

Recently the Nolts paged through an extensive scrapbook chronicling Abigail's life.

Her mother said, "It's good to review what has happened. It helps put life in perspective, and reminds us not to take so many things for granted."

Thanksgiving is top priority every day in the Nolt household.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Got turkey?

Better hurry if you don't, because those big birds are flying out of the markets right now as if they still had feathers.

After pondering the issue for a while, I've concluded there is probably not a single thing I could write about this upcoming Thanksgiving celebration that hasn't been written about a gazillion times before.

Like most Americans, we are extremely thankful for our freedom, loving family and friends, for a bounty of safe and abundant food, for warm shelter and for steady employment — not hard with dairy cows. But, each year brings its own specific blessings to each person and family, and Thanksgiving makes us mindful of just a few.

The Farmer promptly lists rain...rain...and rain at the top of his thankfulness list. In fact, several of the things for which we are personally thankful are moisture-related. No surprise there.

I'm thankful for a new well pumping fresh and delicious water out of a narrow bore drilled deep into the ground under the backyard pine tree. The continuing drought finally forced us to do what we probably should have done a long time ago relating to our water supplies.

I'm thankful for soybeans and corn still in the field to harvest, though finishing the job has proved a challenge with the blessings of the return of abundant rains. (There we go again, complaining about the weather).

I'm thankful for a bountiful crop of heifer calves, despite my grumbling when all the pens are full and where to put yet another bouncing, bawling, black-and-white baby poses a dilemma.

I'm thankful the downstairs windows are washed for the year and the storm windows in place. (Not my favorite job). And for a stack of dry wood on the basement porch to feed the woodstove and keep us toasty warm.

I'm thankful for a daughter and son-in-law who have kept our large lawn moved with their lawn tractor the last several weeks, after ours developed a problem, which will have to be repaired over the winter.

I'm thankful that Bold, the cow that managed to get herself stuck in pond mud last weekend, appears to have no residual effects from her out-of-pasture adventure.

I'm thankful for a shelf stashed full of jars of home-canned tomatoes despite the garden's drought woes. In any extreme, last-minute, mealtime-fix-in's-crunch, homemade tomato soup can come to the rescue in about six minutes.

I'm thankful for an assortment of everyday household items which passed into my possession following mom's peaceful passing away last winter. Each time I use things like her casserole dishes, canning jars, storage containers and stationery reminds me how I miss her, but helps to keep her memory close.

I'm thankful for grandchildren who are still enthralled with simple things like crayons and markers, storybooks, collecting insects, digging in sandpiles and fruit-snack treats, because it gives The Farmer and I a great excuse to act like kids again with them.

I'm thankful that once again we can observe a day of thanksgiving and gratitude by hanging out with family and friends for a couple of hours, eating until we are as stuffed as the menu entree, and being blessed with the good health that allows such overindulgence.

I'm thankful that we can each express, in our own ways, Thanksgiving gratitude that this nation and our people may continue to be so blessed with the freedom and the plenty which we have for so long taken for granted.

And maybe saying that a gazillion and one times is still not enough.

A blessed and safe Thanksgiving to you and your loved ones.

TOUGH & NIMBLE

When Gull Waddell isn't using his AGCO ST45 compact tractor to mow grass or haul round bales on his 25-acre horse ranch, he's putting it to work as owner of GTW Landscaping in Rougemont, NC.

"With the price of gas the way it is, I don't want to be towing a 5,000- to 7,000-pound tractor around on a trailer," he says. "That's one reason I like the AGCO compact so well. It has enough power and weight to handle heavy 3-point hitch implements; yet it's light enough to haul around on the job."

Holidays Are Coming Are We Having Fun Yet?

The holidays can be a stressful time for many folks. Most of us are striving for the Currier and Ives Christmas, but in reality many people are also dreading the holidays.

How can you beat back the dread and have a family holiday you can enjoy?

Start by lowering your expectations. Be more realistic about what you can and cannot do. Remember that your family traditions are unique and that it is important to keep those that are meaningful and important, and it is all right to get rid of things that just cause more stress.

Our one tradition is to have fondue with close family friends on Christmas Eve. We all look forward to this event; so much so that when we tried to change it we got lots of complaints from the kids. We had no idea how important this one tradition was to them. So instead of dropping that tradition we just changed the gift giving and pared down our list. It took a lot of pressure off and everyone understood.

The following tips can help relieve some of the holiday stress.

Reassess and prioritize. Holiday stress sets in when you try to do it all. Stress is an emotional reaction to circumstances that you feel are out of control. Take some time out. Rethink what is stressing you and look for alternatives.

Delegate — Does the house need cleaning or decorating? Let each family member be responsible for a room. When you delegate, you have to make your expectations clear to your kids, and you may have to lower your standards a bit.

Don't give in to the "gimmes," "I want, I want!" This familiar phrase can wear parents down over the holidays, but giving in to your child's every request can cause financial distress.

It is okay to tell your child that a gift is out of your price range. Tell him that even Santa Claus has limited funds.

Another way to fight the commercialism of the holidays is to beef up on the traditions that don't cost any extra money. You can bake cookies, go caroling, give to needy families or volunteer. Explain to your kids that there are a lot of families who don't have as much as they do." To get kids into the spirit of giving, ask them to pick a few of their slightly loved toys to donate to the less fortunate.

Be realistic about relatives. When the in-laws visit this season, have realistic expectations for the short term. The holidays are not the time to try to solve past issues with family members. If going to a certain relative's house every year causes a lot of stress, decide if you really need to do it. Maybe you can go every other year instead.

Flexibility can buy you time Are you having trouble getting things done with the kids home from school? Why not try sharing babysitting with a neighbor or friend. Perhaps someone could take the kids to the movies while you bake, shop or get other holiday chores completed.

Set limits for college kids. A college student home for the holidays can wreak havoc on family routines. For months now, your teen has been on his own and doing things differently. You'll need to set some ground rules in advance and everyone will have to compromise. It is important that parents and kids be respectful of each other.

Above all else, parents should take it easy on themselves over the holidays. Many people are so concerned by what others might say about them if they don't do everything perfectly. Remember no one is perfect.

Farm Credit Tours Chester County

MidAtlantic Farm Credit conducted its annual Ladies Appreciation Day bus trip for the wives of farmers in Baltimore, Carroll and Harford counties on Oct. 22. The day started with an educational tour of John C. Leo and Son Mushroom Farm in Oxford. Most of the ladies had never seen the process of growing mushrooms. In the afternoon, they enjoyed a guided tour of Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Presently our Thanksgiving plans are up in the air. But, if I have some 20 people here for a meal, you'll probably hear more about the holiday later.

Just now my life centers around my husband's doctor appointments. The other week we were sent to the emergency room at a local hospital for some blood tests. We arrived at the appointed hour, but then waited for two hours until our name was called.

That was just the beginning as after laying on a cot, undressed, for two more hours, we finally got someone's attention and went home to a 10 p.m. supper. No one claimed us as their patient, and I feared I'd have to go home and leave him at the hospital. In the morning I had already spent over an hour at a different hospital for another CAT scan. No one explained anything to us and it was so very frustrating.

I've finally got all of my many flower bulbs out of the ground. In fact, some are properly called gladiolus corms, canna rhizomes, dahlia tubers, and tuberous day lilies. Whatever you call them, they need to be stored until spring in the basement.

My one good crop from the garden this year was a basket of nice onions. I always like to fry some in the pan when I make liver. Food seems to be an important part of our day as I try to plan interesting menus to tempt my husband to eat. We always have desserts at our house. In fact, there are usually several dishes in the oven waiting for us. We have many quarts of sour cherries frozen for pies this year.

Ads Promising Debt Relief May Be Offering Bankruptcy

Turning to a business that offers help in solving debt problems may seem like a reasonable solution when your bills become unmanageable.

Be cautious.

Before you do business with any company, check it out with your local consumer protection agency or the Better Business Bureau in the company's location.

Whether your debt dilemma is the result of an illness, unemployment, or overspending, it can seem overwhelming. In your effort to get solvent, be on the alert for advertisements that offer seemingly quick fixes. While the ads pitch the promise of debt relief, they rarely say relief may be spelled b-a-n-k-r-u-p-t-c-y.

And although bankruptcy is one option to deal with financial problems, it's generally considered the option of last resort. The reason: it has a long-term negative impact on your creditworthiness. A bankruptcy stays on your credit report for 10 years, and can hinder your ability to get credit, a job, insurance or even a place to live.

The Federal Trade Commission cautions consumers to read between the lines when faced with ads in newspapers, magazines, or even telephone directories.

Solutions that may sound simple often involve bankruptcy proceedings, which can hurt your credit and cost you attorneys' fees.

3 tablespoons chicken or turkey broth
1 cup chopped onions
1 cup chopped celery

Add:

1 cup shredded carrots

Simmer five minutes. Remove from pan and set aside. In pan, add 1 pound roll of turkey or pork breakfast sausage. Break apart and cook until all pink is gone. Drain well. When cool, put into food processor and pulsate until all pieces are crumbly looking.

1 tablespoon butter
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons snipped chives
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
¾ cup plain or whole-wheat flour

Vegetable oil, for frying

In large saucepan, cook potatoes in lightly salted boiling water about 20 minutes or until tender. Drain.

APRICOT AND HONEY-GLAZED TURKEY

16-pound turkey
¼ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon black pepper

Glaze:

16-ounce can apricot halves
⅓ cup orange blossom honey
¼ cup butter, melted
3 teaspoons seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ cup chicken broth
Grape clusters and fresh herbs for garnish (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Rinse turkey and pat dry. Tie legs close to body and fold wing tips back or secure with skewers or cotton string. Brush turkey inside and out with olive oil. In a small bowl, combine salt, thyme, and white and black pepper. Sprinkle turkey with seasonings and transfer to a rack in a roasting pan.

Drain apricot halves, reserving syrup. Set aside six halves for garnish. Puree remaining apricots in blender or food processor with honey, melted butter, seasoned salt, and pepper. Brush turkey with glaze. Pour broth and apricot syrup into bottom of pan. Cover turkey loosely with tented foil. Roast turkey for two hours.

Baste turkey with pan drippings, and begin basting frequently for 1½-2 hours more, or until juices run clear and a meat thermometer inserted in the thigh registers 180 degrees. Remove foil during last 30 minutes of roasting. Transfer turkey to a serving platter and let it rest in a warm place for 20 minutes. Serve garnished with clusters of grapes, apricot halves, and fresh herbs, if desired. Serves 10-12.

There's no place like home... especially when there's a gathering of beloved family members and friends around the table, sharing a bounty of festive comfort food.

Begin the festive meal with an all-time favorite — tender slices of roasted turkey. All eyes will be on the host, hostess or perhaps a young adult in the family as they carve, so this is the time to show off a bit.

To make carving a spectacular yet simple part of the meal, Cutco Cutlery suggests using a carving fork to hold the meat in place, then carving across the grain with a sharp, recessed-edge carving knife, using long sweeping strokes to ensure impressive, smooth, even slices. Call 1-800-283-1760 for a free 28-page booklet on how to chose and care for cutlery.

Once everyone has a serving of turkey, begin the passing of delicious side dishes, starting with a comfort food that ranks high on everyone's list — potatoes. Make them extra special for this gathering by creating Mashed Potatoes With Garlic, Parsley and Olive Oil.

MASHED POTATOES WITH GARLIC, PARSLEY AND OLIVE OIL

2 pounds potatoes, peeled and quartered
¼ cup extra virgin olive oil
¼ cup milk
3 large garlic cloves, crushed
Salt and pepper
¼ cup chopped flat-leaf parsley

Cook potatoes in large saucepan of boiling water about 20 minutes or until tender. Drain potatoes well; return to pan.

Warm olive oil and milk in small saucepan; stir in crushed garlic. Add mixture to potatoes; add salt and pepper to taste and mash well. When potatoes are smooth and well seasoned, stir in chopped parsley; transfer to serving dish. Makes 4 servings.

Consuming Thoughts

Times have changed and so has our perception of turkey. Once a meat prepared only once or twice a year, we now eat turkey year-round.

Turkey has an interesting history and is truly a part of American tradition and heritage.

Long before Columbus, the wild turkey was an important source of food to the American Indians. In addition to meat, turkeys supplied feathers for clothing and headdress and sharp spears for arrows.

Wild turkeys greeted Christopher Columbus when he arrived in America n 1492. When Columbus returned to Europe, turkeys went with him. Spanish conquistadors also brought live turkeys back to Europe. By the early 1500's, turkeys were being raised in several countries.

By the time the Pilgrims landed in America in 1620, they already knew about turkey. European domestic turkeys were crossbred with the American wild turkeys producing the early ancestor of the modern turkey. Soon, the turkey became a major food source.

When the Pilgrims served it on the first Thanksgiving Day, the turkey became a symbol of American tradition.

Turkeys today are also bred to tenderness and greater meat yield. High quality feeding and breeding produce a high quality bird. Today, the only differences between a hen and a tom are the sex and the size (a male tom is generally larger than 16 pounds while a female hen is less than 16 pounds).

Historically, a tom was considered tougher than a hen. This is no longer the case through modern breeding. Turkey is an all-American, year-round favorite. Best of all, it's good for you. Turkey is high in protein, low in fat and low in calories.

Before you purchase a turkey this season you probably have several questions like, "How many people will this turkey serve? How much will be around for leftovers?"

The answer to the questions are: Allow ¾ to 1 pound of turkey weight per serving for a turkey 12 pounds and under. For a turkey over 12 pounds, allow ½ to ¾ pound of turkey weight per person. If you know the servings per pounds you can buy accordingly and anticipate the amount of leftovers.

The most popular time of the year for turkey preparation is coming up. Here are a few tips to make your holidays go a little smoother:

- Stuff the turkey right before roasting. Stuffing the turkey early can cause undesirable bacteria to grow and food poisoning may occur.
- To enhance the browning quality, flavor and moistness of the skin brush the turkey with butter before roasting.
- Roast the turkey completely at one time. Interrupted roasting provides a greater danger for undesirable bacteria growth.
- Allow the turkey to stand one minute per pound for easier carving. (For example, allow the turkey to stand 20 minutes for a 20 pound turkey).
- After roasting, separate the meat from the bones and freeze it for up to one month. Thaw in the refrigerator and use in casseroles and salads.

Ag Ed Foundation Recognizes Teachers, Donors

GLEN BURNIE, Md. — The Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation, Inc. (MAEF) conducted their 14th Annual Banquet and Awards Ceremony Nov. 7 in Glen Burnie with 250 friends of agricultural education in attendance.

Bill Satterfield of the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. served as the Master of Ceremonies for the evening's program which included donor recognition, presentation of teacher awards, an auction and a presentation entitled "MAEF: Past, Present and Future."

Mary Murray of North Harford and Riverside Elementary Schools in Harford County shared her experience at the Ag in the Classroom Summer Teacher Workshop and talked about how she conducted her own workshop for teachers in her local schools.

Patty Spears, an Eldersburg Elementary School teacher in Carroll County, talked about her experience with the Mobile Agri-Science Lab that recently visited her school. These two teachers and their students are only a small portion of the 66,000 individuals who are reached annually through MAEF's educational programs.

Naomi Knight, right, member of MAEF Board of Directors, presented Mini-Grant Awards to, from left, Lori Powell, Damascus High School in Montgomery County; Lavonne Radonovich, Clopper Mill Elementary in Montgomery County; and Mary Murray, North Harford Elementary in Harford County.

Three teachers were presented with grants to conduct a lesson or unit that they each developed incorporating agricultural concepts. Receiving Mini-Grant Awards were Lori Powell of Damascus High School in Montgomery County for "Hand-in-Hand Gardening Adventures," Lavonne Radonovich of Clopper Mill Elementary, also in Montgomery County, for "Gardening Adventures: Discovering Earth's Secrets" and Mary Murray of North Harford and Riverside Elementary Schools in Harford County for "Holy Cow."

Excellence in Teaching About Agriculture Awards were presented to four teachers for their outstanding teaching of agricultural concepts in a specific lesson or unit. Teachers receiving these awards included: Melissa Moore of Ballenger Creek Elementary in Frederick County for "Corn," from Harford County Mary Murray of North Harford Elementary with "Holy Cow" and Karen Dausch of North Bend Elementary for "Happy Pig" and "Many Hats of the Farmer." The final Teacher Excellence award was presented to Lori Powell of Damascus High School in Montgomery County for "Seeds as Food."

"MAEF: Past, Present and Future," was presented showing the audience from where the Foundation has come, where they are currently with their educational programs and funding support and where they are going to expand their educational efforts into the middle and high schools and to Maryland's general public.

The program was highlighted with an auction led by auctioneer Andy Cashman of the Maryland State Fair. Nearly $6,000 was raised for the Foundation with low-numbered ag tags for farm trucks being a popular item. John Sullivan of the Harford County Economic Development Office presented a check for $3,976 to the Foundation. It was donated from the proceeds of the first Maryland Barbecue Cook-Off conducted in Bel Air in August.

Miracle Marble Cake

2¼ cups flour
1½ cups sugar
3½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons cocoa

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt. Add oil, egg whites, and milk. Beat well. Pour ⅔ of batter into cake pan. Add cocoa to remaining batter. Swirl in with white batter. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes.

ANSWER Mary Beard, New Oxford, requested a recipe for baked oatmeal. She wrote that her family is from the Midwest, and after 11 years in this state, she has tried baked oatmeal two times in restaurants, but can't find someone who will tell her how to make it. Thanks to the many people who answered this request. It is interesting to see the many different yet similiar recipes sent in. Unfortunately, we do not have room to print all of them.

Baked Oatmeal

1 cup butter, melted
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
3 cups quick oats (uncooked oatmeal)
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla or maple flavoring

Put all ingredients in a large mixing bowl. With a wire whisk or wooden spoon, stir vigorously and well. Pour into lightly sprayed 9x9-inch or 8x11½-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-30 minutes or until firmly set.

Variations: add raisins, chopped apples, cherries, or other fruit, cinnamon, or cinnamon hearts, chocolate chips or butterscotch or peanut butter chips — the possibilities are as big as your tastes or imagination. Even nuts if you like, would work. Be sure to drain canned fruits first.

Kathryn Martin
Quarryville

3 cups oatmeal
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

The Federal Bureau of Investigation

Just the letters—FBI—seem to demand respect. And even though you respect the members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, do you actually know what they do?

Today, FBI jurisdiction covers more than 200 categories of federal crimes It

1 Upholds the law by investigating violations of federal criminal law
2 Protects the United States from foreign intelligence and terrorist activities
3 Provides leadership and law enforcement assistance to federal, state, local and international agencies- including fingerprint identification, laboratory needs and police training

Celebrate A Holiday

You probably get excited when you know a holiday is coming up. After all, that usually means a day or more that you don't have to go to school. But holidays are more than just a way to get a day off school.

The word "holiday" actually comes from "holy day." It is a day set aside for either religious or secular (not religious) observance. Many times, holidays are observed with public ceremonies, such as parades or religious ceremonies or services.

Ancient civilizations had festivals in honor of certain themes—such as life, death and harvest. Some of them are recognized today in holidays around the world.

Important religious holidays—such as Christmas and Yom Kippur—are officially recognized in some countries, which usually means a day of rest from work and school. Some holidays are observed with big feasts, while during others you fast, which means you don't eat. For instance, Easter is a feast day, while Jews fast for Yom Kippur. During their month of Ramadan, Muslims have periods of fasting and meditation.

Holidays can be a combination of religious and secular traditions. Countries also observe patriotic holidays. In the United States, we commemorate our independence on July 4. France's French Bastille Day and Mexico's Cinco de Mayo observe historic events. Others are to observe a leader's birthday, such as Presidents' Day in the United States and the emperor's birthday in Japan.

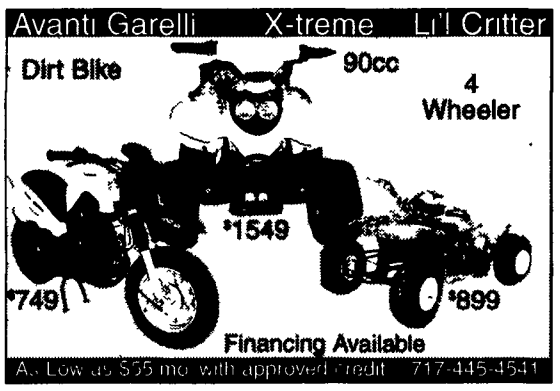
How To Make Perfect Turkey Broth

Homemade broth is an excellent way of using up scraps and bones of turkey. Long and slow cooking is the secret. Put bones and scraps of turkey carcass, along with whatever flavoring vegetables you have on hand — onion, carrot, snips of parsley, celery — to cook in water. Simmer mixture at least three hours. A pinch of thyme adds good flavor to poultry. Season to taste with salt and pepper. After cooking, remove bones. Refrigerate and discard fat that will rise to top after broth is chilled.



Clean Sponges Often

Wiping kitchen surfaces with a sponge provides an inviting environment for bacteria. The average used sponge harbors 7.2 billion bacteria.

Bacteria can survive for days, even weeks, in a sponge because they multiply where there is moisture and nutrients. The pebbly surface of the sponge makes it easy for bacteria to cling to it and there is a steady supply of nutrients when it is used to wipe up food scraps.

These same bacteria will spread around the kitchen as you wipe other surfaces. Frequently wash sponges, dishcloths, and dish towels in the hot cycle of your washer or use clean paper towels.

Betsy Huber Is First Woman To Head Pa. State Grange

DEANN CARDARELLA
Grange Specialist

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Betsy Huber of Lincoln University has been elected president of the Pennsylvania State Grange. Huber, a member of Goshen Grange # 121 in Chester County, is the first woman to serve in the top position in the 130-year history of the state organization.

Huber was elected during the 130th State Session of the Pennsylvania State Grange that met in Washington in October.

Huber has been a longtime standing member of the Pennsylvania State Grange with approximately 40 years of membership. As a young child, home was a dairy farm in Westtown, Chester County. Huber's father, Ed Zug Jr., served as master for Goshen Grange # 121 following her birth. Her grandfather, Chester Supplee, was treasurer of Goshen Grange and Chester County Pomona Grange for many years.

"We had an active Junior Grange," Huber said. "I am thankful for the experience and training I received there.

"As a child, we always attended the Grange as a family. Then when my children were born, the tradition continued. We always had them with us at meetings. Growing up in the Grange and then as a mother myself, I have always appreciated the opportunity for family togetherness in an organization that truly works for the betterment of our community on a local, state and national level."

Upon accepting the top state position, Huber resigned as legislative aide to Representative Art Hershey, a position she held for 10 years. While serving the 13th District, Huber was involved with many of the legislative activities of Rep. Hershey including the House of Representatives' Agricultural Committee and Environmental Resource Committee.

"Legislatively, the Pennsylvania State Grange represents its members as well as the rural community on the state level," Huber said. "Throughout my career with Rep. Hershey, I was grateful to have that Harrisburg-connection on a day-to-day basis. My professional experience has helped prepare me to take the reigns for our organization."

Throughout her years at the Grange, Huber has served in many capacities. Early on, the Hubers were the Grange Young Couple. She is secretary of Goshen Grange and a member of the executive committee of her Pomona Grange. In 1978, she was elected the first female master of Goshen Grange and was Pomona Master from 1994-96.

Prior to State Master, Huber was State Overseer for six years. Previously, she served six years as State Pomona. From 1989-1992, she worked in the Harrisburg state office as office manager for past master William Ringler.

On a national level, she was secretary to Mary Buffington when she was National Grange Director of Women's Activities.

Other accomplishments outside the Grange include being elected the first female supervisor of Upper Oxford Township in 1992. She will complete her second term in 2003. She is treasurer of the Chester County Association of Township Officials and was recently appointed to the Resolutions-Legislative Committee of the State Association (PSATS).

Living in the rural end of Chester County with over 4,500 acres in the township Ag Security Area, Huber was able to work to change a zoning ordinance to help preserve fertile farmland. Huber also served on the Chester County Water Resources Task Force where she helped to develop the water resources component of the county comprehensive plan approved in September 2002.

"I am very proud to represent the members of the Pennsylvania State Grange as the State Master," said Huber. "But as I take on my new capacity of service to the Pennsylvania State Grange, I must first acknowledge my gratitude to William A. Steel, my predecessor," Huber said. "In his six years of leadership and commitment to our organization, he has made some wonderful changes and introduced us to new ideas including a presence on the World Wide Web. He wasn't afraid to try new things and make changes. Our organization is very grateful to the commitment he showed during his six-year reign."

Quality legislative representation for Grange members and rural Pennsylvania has always been priority for the organization. In addition, Huber said she would like to improve communications between the State Grange and local units. Membership is another priority.

"Of course I would like to increase membership especially among the young-married-age group and work to publicize our activities more on a local and state level," she said. "The Grange is a wonderful organization open to all ages. Whether it is legislative interests, family fun or community service, the Grange has something for everyone. We need to continue to get the word out so rural and urban communities are open to join the ranks of our membership."

As the first woman to serve in the top state leadership role for the Pennsylvania State Grange, Huber doesn't necessarily feel she has entered a new frontier.

"Since the 1800s, women have always been well accepted in our organization. To the best of my knowledge, I was the first woman to run in Pennsylvania. In fact, many other states have women as masters. Becoming the first woman isn't an issue for me; however, doing my best for the organization is what counts."

Huber and her husband Henry have been married for 36 years. Anything Goes (In Fashion) At York County Society Of Farm Women Convention

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

YORK (York Co.) — Approximately 180 ladies, many of them decked out in colorful hats for the occasion, participated in the 63rd annual convention of the York County Society of Farm Women recently at the York Expo Center.

The theme, "Anything Goes — In Fashion," reflected guest speaker Kelly Miller McKeown's life's work as a fashion designer. McKeown, York, who has designed Olympic outfits for several countries, brought samples and pictures of her designs to show the audience.

The day also included a business session, with reports from county officers, and a program with not only McKeown but also state dairy princess Raechel Kilgore, Airville, and a poem read by Lois Manifold.

Keith Weire, son of a Farm Women Society member, was the soloist for the afternoon.

Weire was followed by Thomas Gibbs, Shiloh, a historian who shared several humorous and sentimental stories about the contribution of women — many of them farm women — during the Civil War. Women replaced men in the teaching and nursing profession during the war, a change that has remained in place today, he said.

Recipients of the food gathering effort was the York County "Food Bank and the Food Pantry Clearing House.

The ways and means committee gave a check to Access York, an organization dedicated to eliminating domestic violence, and to the York County 4-H Center. The 4-H Center is planning to put the money towards the construction of a building on York Expo grounds where livestock, dairy, and horse clinics could be conducted.

The day also included a cellphone visit from state president Catherine Schott, Lebanon, who was unable to attend the meeting.

The upcoming state convention will be conducted January 13 at the Radisson Camp Hill. Cost is $22 and registration begins at 9:30 a.m. Call Treva Stiles at (717)235-1132 for more information.

Group 12 won first place award for attendance, followed by Groups 15, 18, 31, and 34 in second place and Group 21 in third place.

Direct Marketing Workshop Planned For Ag Professionals

WILMINGTON, Del. — Are you interested in direct marketing as a way to help farmers increase profits? If yes, plan to attend the upcoming workshop, "Direct Marketing Training for Farm Profitability — for Cooperative Extension and Other Agriculture Professionals."

The Direct Marketing workshop will take place Thursday, Dec. 5, at the Wyndham Wilmington Hilton, in Wilmington, Del. The Future of Our Food and Farms Summit, presented by The Food Trust and NESAWG Resource Harvest, continues through Dec. 6. Participants are encouraged to attend both days, and scholarships are available.

Offered in conjunction with the fourth annual Future of our Food and Farms Summit: The Future Grows Here, the workshop brings together a unique mix of farm market managers, entrepreneurs, farmers, policymakers, and other agricultural professionals. Individually and in groups, presenters will offer insights from their own experience in marketing and the most current information on how to grow successful direct marketing ventures.

Workshop organizers planned this event in response to widening interest in direct marketing from Cooperative Extension agents, state department of agriculture and USDA personnel, and their clients. It is the first part of a two-year collaborative project sponsored by USDA/SARE to provide such training.

Presenting organizations include The Food Trust (formerly the Farmers' Market Trust), the Mid-Atlantic Food and Farm Coalition, Delaware State University, Maryland Department of Agriculture, Rutgers Cooperative Extension of New Jersey, University of Maryland, and Penn State Cooperative Extension.

For more information, contact Meredith Stone at (215) 568-0830, Ext. 10; or the Summit's Website, www.foodfarm.org.

Space Shuttle Returns First Soybeans Grown On Space Station In Commercial Farming Experiment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Like farmers across the nation bringing in their crops this season, researchers in Wisconsin are carefully taking stock of a very special harvest — one grown aboard the International Space Station.

They've measured and weighed plants, counted seeds, and collected additional physical information from the first-ever soybean crop grown aboard the orbiting research laboratory.

Now, the research team will begin several months of chemical and biological tests on the plants that will reveal whether microgravity — the low-gravity environment inside the Space Station — has changed the chemical makeup of the seeds.

Soybeans — a leading source of protein in the human diet — are used in a variety of products, from oil to crayons. Finding improved varieties could have a significant economic impact on a soybean business worth billions of dollars each year.

"We want to examine the seeds produced by plants grown on the station to see if they have any unique, desirable traits," said Dr. Tom Corbin, a research scientist for Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc., a DuPont subsidiary with headquarters in Des Moines, Iowa, and the industrial sponsor for the experiment.

"If we find changes, then we want to know if the positive traits can be inherited genetically by future generations of plants for the benefit of farmers and consumers," Corbin explained.

Space Shuttle Atlantis visited the orbiting laboratory this month during the STS-112 mission to deliver new experiment equipment and other supplies and return with the soybean plants and other completed experiments.

"This experiment and others are paving the way for improving crops grown on Earth, as well as potentially feeding people living in space," said Mark Nall, director of NASA's Space Product Development Program at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. The program has helped companies fly several experiments on the station by working with one of NASA's 15 Commercial Space Centers located across America.

"The Space Station is giving companies a chance to grow plants that require several months to mature," said Nall.

NASA International Space Station Science Officer Peggy Whitson took care of the soybeans on the station since the experiment began in June. In one of her e-mail letters to family and friends this summer, she reported, "The beans looked mature and the leaves are turning brown."

The plants and seed pods were turning brown because scientists wanted them to dry out and be preserved for tests on Earth.

It turned out to be a very good crop.

"The first soybean crop grown in space returned in excellent condition, and a total of 83 seeds were harvested from 42 seed pods," said Dr. Weijia Zhou, director of the Wisconsin Space Center for Automation and Robotics at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. "Since a plant's habitat plays a key role in determining the physiological and biological characteristics of the plant, we believe that reduced gravity may affect plant chemistry."

The Wisconsin center is a NASA Commercial Space Center, and was responsible for building the Advanced Astroculture™ plant growth chamber where the soybeans germinated and grew for 97 days.

"We will analyze the oil, proteins, carbohydrates and secondary metabolites in the seeds produced in space," noted Corbin. "We will continue analysis of the soybeans at Pioneer's laboratory in Johnston, Iowa, and we anticipate having results in two to three months."

NASA is interested in the technologies that enable production of commercially important crops such as soybeans in space because these technologies will be needed to produce vegetable crops that support a long-term human presence in space.

Can new varieties of crops be produced using seeds produced by space-grown plants? Do these space plants produce seeds with higher oil content or improved nutritional value? Can elite seeds be produced that will improve farmers' crop yields and the quality of plants products used in consumer products?

Zhou and Corbin hope to begin answering these questions by analyzing the space-grown plants and seeds. On Earth, the development of naturally bred crop seeds is time consuming, usually taking several years. If this process can be accelerated with space-grown plants, it would make the station an attractive research laboratory for industry to use in crop development.

"As a science company, DuPont knows that future research opportunities may come from totally different venues and needs as we look ahead," said Dr. Thomas M. Connelly, DuPont's chief science and technology officer. "The discovery process often requires exploring in unprecedented avenues to unleash the next wave of innovation, and we are committed to discovering new and meaningful innovation wherever it is."

Child's Quest For Tractor Advertising Harvests Expansive 'Literature' Collection

Tom Buch examines an International Harvestor Farm Equipment catalog from 1962 and others rare literature pertaining to tractors and equipment.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

FARMERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — When Tom Buch was six years old and visiting the Pennsylvania Farm Show, he made his rounds to all the exhibitors and picked up the free promotional handouts. Much to his mother's chargin, he took a shopping bag of it home.

"My mom fussed and wanted me to throw it out," Buch said, "but I didn't."

Those freebies formed the foundation of Buch's "literature" collection, which numbers in the thousands.

Buch didn't collect the pieces because he forsaw the value these would someday have for collectors. Instead he'd spend hours pouring over the materials, fascinated by the different models sold by farm equipment dealers.

His own father Bud Buch owned the Oliver dealership in Farmersville. As a kid, Tom would order "literature" from the dealership, even stuff that was never sold in the state. Today he stills owns some advertising sheets of items such as high crop clearance tractors on "stilts." Those ad materials and those of other models are almost more collectible than antique tractors.

"Probably because everyone can find room to keep a page, but not everyone has room to store a tractor," Buch said of prices that range from $10 to hundreds of dollars.

Buch also has manuals, parts books, and equipment magazines from the 1930s-1970s.

"These 'Better Farming" magazines were sent out four times yearly," Buch said of the pristine condition of a large collection he managed to stash away. "Dealers had to pay for issues to be sent to their customers."

The advertising pieces rekindle Buch's memories, some fond and others not so pleasant such as a 1972 garden tractor the Oliver Company made. "We couldn't give them (garden tractors) away back then. But today, they're among the hottest things on the market and all the literature, parts and operator's manuals that accompany them."

The high collector value is attributed to the rare, short-lived span of the model.

Buch said he did not realize the value of his collection until he donated a piece of literature to the Hart-Parr/Oliver Collectors Association Auction in the early 1990s. A single sheet of advertising sold for more than $100. That was eight years ago.

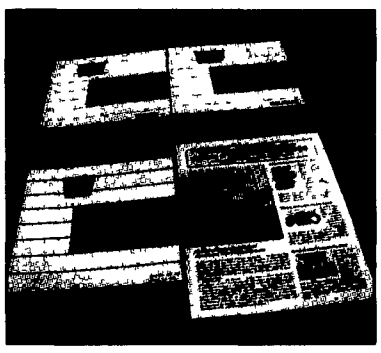
Although his collection continues to bring him much pleasure, Buch said, that some events in the past year have played a part in his deciding to sell about 250 pieces of his collection.

"I had three friends in their 50s who died this past year. I thought I'm not going to die and make others clean this up," he said of his collection.

Buch continues to operate Farmersville Equipment where he has many of his treasured pieces displayed. But more than 250 pieces will be auctioned at Wolgemuth's Black Friday's Antique Tractor Sale Nov. 29. The sale starts at 9 a.m. After the tractors and farm toys (from numerous collectors) are sold, Buch's literature will go up for bid starting at 6:30 p.m.

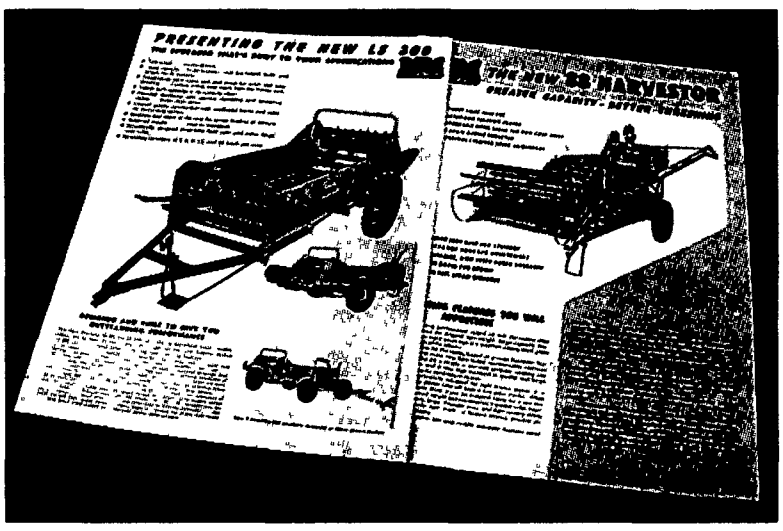
"None of the pieces are duplicates," Buch said.

For more information, call Buch at (717) 354-2150.



This is a sample of some of the advertising literature Buch ordered as a child while working for his dad's Oliver dealership.

"Better Farming" magazines were printed four times annually and sent to a customer list dealers compiled.



These are some of the more than 250 pieces to be auctioned Black Friday. None of the pieces are duplicates.

Popular Carriage Clock Prices Vary Widely

Carriage clocks are always a favorite with collectors. In fact there were more of them made from the late 18th to early 20th century than any other type of clock. One reason for their popularity is that there is literally a price for every budget.

The October 5 Skinner auction offered 24 opportunities and a surprise. A rather plain looking English Georgian, ebonized repeating carriage clock with an estimate of $2,500-$3,500 went for a whopping $14,100. An expert collector recognized it's importance. It was marked "Barwise," for John Barwise of London (1790-1842). While not the most showy, it had important provenance.

On the other hand, a true beauty, a French aesthetic movement porcelain mounted repeating alarm carriage clock, late 19th century fetched $4,994. It had been estimated at $3,000-$5,000. The price difference can be attributed to a matter of beauty versus the best, and that the English produced fewer than the French.

To early 19th century travelers, carriage clocks were as important as luggage. Like luggage, they had carrying handles and their own carrying cases. Rarely are they found with their cases these days. There are many types that included oval forms and miniatures.

The most common were the rectangular with plain brass frames. Sometimes they were polished and finished with a clear lacquer or gilded These were also sometimes elaborately engraved with floral or foliate motifs. When they are of dore' bronze, popular in France from the late 19th to early 20th century, prices rise. A good example was the French engraved carriage clock, that sold at the Skinner auction for $3,055.

Rarities are the carriage clocks in oval cases made by J. Soldano (1855-1880) of Geneva and Paris. His pieces are stamped "JS." However, a miniature, oval carriage clock, no maker name, of bronze, fetched $411 at the Skinner auction.

CLUES: All carriage clocks are eight-day duration. Some have simple works while others can be very complicated. While most strike with a gong, most desirable are those with a bell. Collectors look for additional features such as an alarm and calendar dials.

Since they all have a serial number either stamped on the movement or on the dial they can be dated by records. If they are French they were stamped on the clock movement by the French maker. It there is an English name on a French clock that identifies the shop that sold it. Exceptions are top quality French clocks with no name.

Among the most beautiful are the clocks with decorated panels. The materials used were cloisonne, decorated porcelain, colored enamel, and ebony with brass detailing.

Designs often reflected popular styles of the times such as Renaisance Revival and Art Nouveau. A help in dating unmarked clocks.

English carriage clocks were usually gilded brass and the hands are usually blued steel.

Their carrying cases were mahogany.

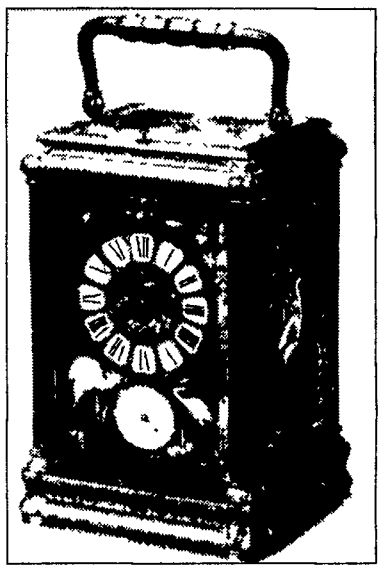
Look for a signature on a painted porcelain panel. Choice examples would be country or Italian figural subjects. These were popular in the late 1890s and expensive then...and now. Few were made.

Many collectors search only for miniatures. The quality of workmanship was as good as the full-size carriage clocks. Because of their small size many weren't signed.

Miniatures were made in three sizes from 1¾- to 4¼-inches high.

Miniatures were timepieces instead of having the striking mechanism that lasted eight days. However, some have alarm or striking works.

As you can tell from the auction prices, it is still possible to start an affordable collection of carriage clocks. Learn as much as you can before jumping into the auction waters. Or, if the price is low you may have a shop or house sale discovery.



This French carriage clock with aesthetic movement and porcelain panels is dated late 19th century. Photo credit: Skinner Auctions, Boston, Mass.

NASS Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

ONE MONTH UNTIL AG CENSUS

The 2002 U.S. Census of Agriculture will be mailed to all growers across the nation in late December. It is only done once every five years, and yes, five years have already passed since the last Ag Census.

You only have to produce $1,000 of agricultural products or keep only a few head of livestock or equine to count as a farm for Census purposes. This includes small, part-time, and hobby farms.

You may not consider yourself as a "farmer," but remember that agriculture goes beyond dairy, livestock, and field crops. It includes other items such as greenhouse and nursery, fruits, vegetables, aquaculture, bees, Christmas trees, maple syrup, llamas, bison, mink, deer, game birds, worms, etc.

You may also consider yourself "retired" from farming. However, it is typical that retired farmers still produce agricultural products, but on a smaller scale than before. It could easily exceed $1,000 of products that were sold or could have been sold which still qualifies you as a farm.

Everyone that receives an Ag Census form needs to complete it and send it back as soon as possible to avoid further mailings. You can call us toll-free at (888) 4AG-STAT or (888) 424-7828 if you have questions after you receive the census form.

If you think that you do not qualify as an agricultural operation, please call the toll-free number to ask if you should be counted.

In Pennsylvania, more than 91,000 forms will be mailed in an effort to account for roughly 60,000 farms. We spent a lot of time to reduce the initial mailing list of potential farm from more than 120,000 names to more than 91,000 by removing as many duplicate names as we could find.

However, some of you will still get more than one Census form for one operation. The front page of the census form gives instructions on how to deal with multiple forms for the same operation. Briefly, you will be asked to complete one form and return it along with the other duplicate forms.

Why is the Ag Census important? Extension is a major user of agricultural statistics. They depend on county statistics from the Census for research, education, services, and programs for growers of all sizes.

The Ag Census provides much county data that is only available once every five years. For some items in the Ag Census, this is the only time that farm demographics and minor commodities are measured, such as goats, bison, llamas, many vegetables, nuts, some berries, pheasants, etc.

Remember, "Agriculture Counts," and we are counting on your response for an accurate Census. When you get the Ag Census form, please fill it out and return it right away to avoid additional taxpayer cost of additional mailings. Thank you!

Year-End Surveys Under Way

Even though the Ag Census is about to start, we must still conduct the usual year-end surveys at this time as well. The surveys mentioned below are conducted in all states so that state and national statistics will show agricultural production for 2002.

It is reasonable for you to ask, "Why do we have to do both?"

First, the usual year-end surveys lead to published reports in December 2002 and January and February, 2003. The Ag Census contacts so many people across the state that it takes a little over a year before the Census can be properly processed and published.

Second, this gives you more time to fill out the Ag Census form. The Census form is longer and contains questions about all agriculture on your operation. The year-end surveys are typically only one or two pages that deal only with one commodity or a group of related commodities.

Third, the year-end surveys are not going to all farmers raising a specific commodity. They go to all of the largest farms and only a few of the medium and small operations.

Now, here is a brief list of the end of year surveys happening now through December.

• County Statistics Survey: We have been able to remove the livestock questions because of the Ag Census. However, we still need other information to publish crops and dairy county estimates on time.

• Dec. 1 Crop/Stocks Survey: This survey only goes to a little more than 1,000 Pennsylvania farmers to measure final acreage, yields, and production for corn, soybeans, tobacco, hay, potatoes, sorghum, and grains stored on farms.

• Off-Farm Grain Stocks: This survey was mailed to about 200 Pennsylvania grain elevators and other off-farm storage facilities. This survey, when combined with on-farm statistics, will give a post-harvest picture of grains in storage here and across the nation from 2002 crops and earlier.

• Dec. 1 Hog Survey and Chicken/Egg Survey: Although we contact the larger hog or chicken operations every month, the Dec. 1 survey contacts many more of the medium and smaller operations. This more extensive survey sets the end of year inventory and leads to production, disposition, and income statistics for the year Dec. 1, 2001 through Dec. 1, 2002.

• Annual Turkey Grower Survey: This survey was mailed to about 400 Pennsylvania turkey growers to measure birds raised here and across the nation.

• End-Of-Season Fruit And Vegetable surveys: In Pennsylvania, the survey is limited to apples, peaches, pears, cherries, grapes, sweet corn, tomatoes, snap beans, strawberries, cabbage, cantaloupes, and pumpkins. The Ag Census will measure all vegetables grown.

A big "thank you." In advance, I want to thank your for your time in these important measurements of the 2002 season.

Chester County Extension Meets In Avondale

Penn State Recognizes Several Extension Employees

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

AVONDALE (Chester Co.) — Board members, extension representatives, and community members gathered at the Stroud Research Center, Avondale, for the Chester County Cooperative Extension's meeting Nov. 14.

After the board members were introduced, Fred Davis, southeast regional director for cooperative extension, gave out service awards to Anna Mae Hughes, nutrition, 25 years; Betty Lou Lusky, state assistant, 25 years; Toni Stuetz, 4-H agent, 10 years; and Steve Dietrich, dairy agent, 5 years.

Also recognized during the evening was Trudy Dougherty, retiring after more than 29 years as extension agent and extension director. "She has grown the program and grown the office," said Fred Davis, regional director for cooperative extension.

The featured speaker was Christine Kellett, director of the Agricultural law Research and Education Center, located at Dickinson School of Law, Carlisle.

When the school was founded, according to Kellett, "I was the only professor who knew you could spell guilt without a "u," she said, so she became the director of the center.

Funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Penn State, and Dickinson School of Law, the center "serves agriculture as a reference center and a resource center," she said. Farmers can e-mail aglaw@psu.edu or call (717) 241-3517 with questions related to legal issues.

Pennsylvania legislature has a clear public policy or supporting agriculture, expressed in the 1980 Right to Farm Law. This limits nuisance suits.

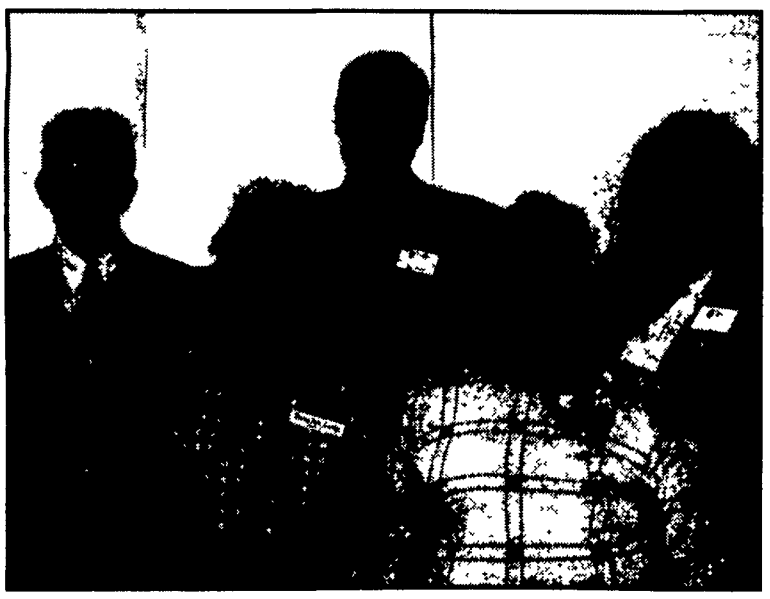
Laws that help plan for and promote agriculture, for example, are the creation of ag security areas. These areas make the land available for conservation easements, a more permanent farmland preservation arrangement.

One-third of agricultural land is lost to development, one-third lost because "farmers can't make a go of it," said Kellett, and one-third to government, as they build roads, schools, sewage plants, etc. Ag security areas, then, protect against loss of farmland to government building.

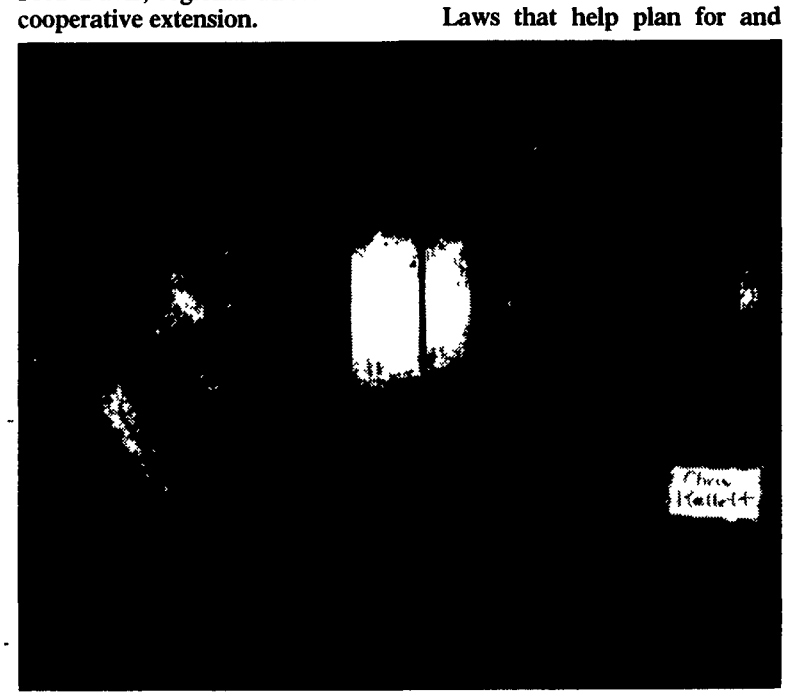
Pennsylvania also has restrictions on township ordinances and laws allowing for easements and ag security areas. Agricultural zoning is also a method of preservation allowed for by law.

Also preferential taxation, such as "Clean and Green" laws help Pennsylvania farmers.

On the other hand, the Clean Streams law and the Nutrient Management Act regulate agriculture.



Those honored for work in the extension service include, from left, is Steve Dietrich, dairy agent, five years; Anna Mae Hughes, nutrition, 25 years; Fred Davis, southeast regional director for cooperative extension; Betty Lou Lusky, state assistant, 25 years; and Toni Stuetz, 4-H agent, 10 years.



At left Trudy Dougherty, extension director, stands with featured speaker Christine Kellett, director of the Agricultural Law Research and Education Center.

Congress Blocks Disaster Aid, Again

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Congress missed another opportunity to assist farmers and ranchers reeling from natural disasters.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., asked for unanimous consent to consider approximately $6 billion in emergency assistance for livestock and crop losses in the 2001 and 2002 production years. Senate Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., objected to bringing the disaster assistance forward.

"We are disappointed that the soon-to-be Senate Majority Leader would block much-needed disaster assistance for farmers and ranchers until next year," said National Farmers Union President Dave Frederickson. "By asking these producers to wait, Congress has essentially asked many farmers and ranchers to head into the holidays with increased debt and the threat of liquidation or bankruptcy. Producers in too many areas of the country will not be able to wait for aid."

The secretary of agriculture has declared 77.8 percent of all U.S. counties disasters in 2002. About 40 percent of all U.S. counties were declared disasters in 2001 and 2002.

Frederickson commended Sens. Baucus; Tom Dachle, D-S.D.; Mark Dayton, D-Minn.; Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.; Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich.; Tim Johnson, D-S.D.; Kent Conrad, D-N.D.; Ben Nelson, D-Neb.; and Harry Reid, D-Nev., for their floor statements in support of emergency disaster assistance.

The Farmers Union leader said emergency disaster assistance will remain a top priority of the organization as the 108th Congress convenes in January.

Gleaner Innovation Continues With R65 And R75 Combines

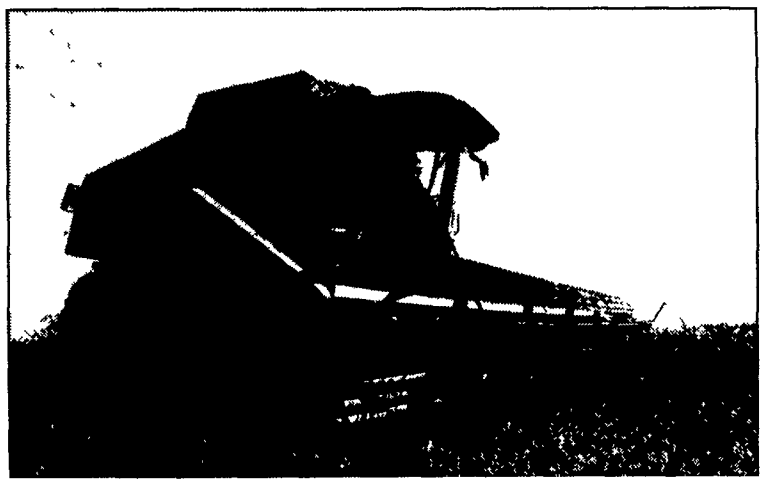
ATLANTA, Ga. — Generations of innovation-seeking Gleaner combine owners won't be disappointed when they see the new look and technologically superior R65 and R75 combines.

Gleaner was the first self-propelled combine, offered the first and still unique transverse rotor for more efficient and thorough grain cleaning and pioneered electrohydraulic controls. Innovations continue with this new generation of combines with improvements in comfort, convenience and efficiency.

"Greater visibility, improved access and a new seat/control console unit in the ComforTech II™ cab will enhance productivity and reduce operator fatigue," says Tom Draper, general marketing manager. "The R65 and R75 also feature new controls and a new monitoring system for even greater efficiency. These Gleaners are ready for a new generation of innovation-hungry combine owners."

The Gleaner Natural Flow Processing System, proven engineering and design, the world-renowned Cummins engines and Gleaner simplicity with performance have all been retained in the new combines. The reason is simple; they have been proven the best across millions of acres of crops by thousands of owner/operators around the world.

Natural Flow Processing, with the transverse rotor exclusive to Gleaner, keeps crop material flowing efficiently through the combine and with less kernel damage. Thorough threshing and 360° of rotary separation produce the highest quality grain possible, while system component design makes service and maintenance easier.



A new generation of innovative combine design and technology designed to keep harvest moving at peak efficiency is available with the new Gleaner R65 and R75 combines.

Deere Adds New DB Series Planters To Seeding Line

LENEXA, Kan. — Many growers are expanding their farm operations and need equipment that will cover more acres in less time. This is especially critical during planting season when, in order to maximize yields, there is an ideal planting window to get the seed in the ground. The new DB Series Planters, the largest planters that John Deere has ever offered, may be the answer for many large row crop operators.

"John Deere is partnering with Bauer Built Mfg. in an allied agreement to manufacture large frame planters," says Mike Pitzer, project manager, John Deere seeding group.

"Bauer Built Mfg. will produce planter frames, complete with markers and hydraulic systems. John Deere will build and support the row units, seed drives, vacuum systems, and monitor systems."

These planters will offer high ground clearance, enhanced field function, superior reliability, and greater field productivity. Here are the size configurations: DB44 — 24 rows, 22-inch spacing; DB60 — 36 rows, 20-inch spacing; DB66 — 36 rows, 22-inch spacing; and DB80 — 32 rows, 30-inch spacing.

"The DB planters feature a new front-fold, three-section, flex-frame design with industry leading John Deere MaxEmerge® Plus row units," says Pitzer. "These frames provide narrow transport widths from 15 feet to 17.5 feet, and have a new hydraulic system and markers."

The new three-section frame offers greater flexibility with a 15-degree up and down wing flex. A telescoping hitch allows for a closer coupling to the tractor for greater maneuverability while planting. Ground clearance during transport for all models range from 22-26 inches. Transport length varies by model but all are less than 50 feet.

Tires used on all four models provide excellent flotation in the field and allow for safe transport. The center frame has four 16.5x16.1 rib implement tires that provide a frame that will raise level when operating in the field. Each wing has two 31-13.5x15 tires in a staggered position that provide smoother flotation. All hydraulic cylinders automatically rephase each time the planter is fully raised.

Tractor horsepower requirements are 235 PTO-hp and above, and all DB planters are drawbar/hitch mounted.

With the DB Series planter, growers will have a high capacity machine, extremely accurate row units and metering systems, and a durable frame design that will cover more acres in less time. For more information, contact your local John Deere dealer or visit the Website at www.JohnDeereAg.com.

Lancaster Oiler Improves Dairy Farm Maintenance

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Level-Flo introduces the Lancaster Oiler™, a portable and versatile lubrication system designed to work with Harvestore® silos with Goliath™ or Alliance® unloaders, conveyor systems, feed mixers and other farm machinery.

The Lancaster Oiler applies food grade canola oil to hard to reach mechanisms to both lubricate metal parts for longer life and protect feed and crops from contact with harmful oils. The unit features both manual and automatic lubrication modes.

The Lancaster Oiler is portable, holds seven gallons of lubricant, and features a high pressure spray applicator that operates at 900 pounds per square inch, helping the light, food grade oil penetrate cracks and crevices in equipment.

Accessories include a hand-held spray wand that fits into the silo door to lubricate unloader chain bushings and pins, safety switch that gives the operator override control of power to the unloader, and a specially designed clean-out tool to clear silage from the door.

The Lancaster Oiler Silo Door, a patent pending recessed door, features a breaker bar that automatically loosens feed packed at the rear of the silo door, making access to the unloader much easier.

A LESSON WELL LEARNED...

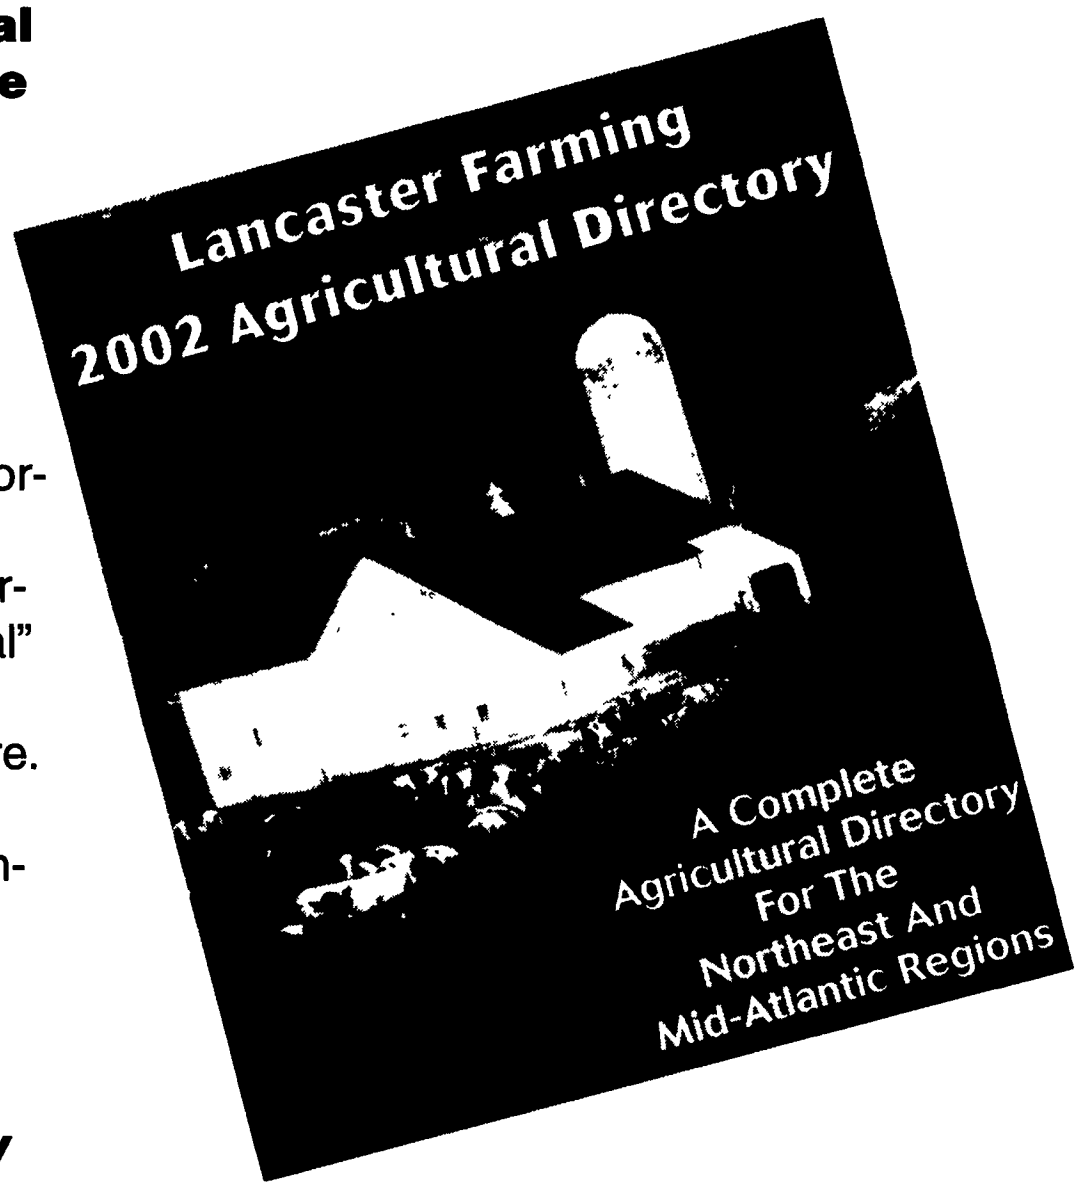
LANCASTER FARMING'S 2003 AG DIRECTORY: YOUR LINK TO DECISION-MAKERS IN THE NORTHEAST AND MID-ATLANTIC

This year marks the third annual Lancaster Farming Ag Directory, your link to the decision-makers of the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic.

For 2003, we plan a new portion of the book: "Essential Contacts." It's a page that the new or beginning farmer can turn to for quick information on a variety of topics, including the "basics" of farming.



Last year, the book totalled 152 pages, and was jam-packed with information from an eight-state region, which includes Pennsylvania and surrounding states. Again, the "essential" reference book will include more for today's decision-makers in agriculture. Lancaster Farming plans to include more names, addresses, phone numbers, and Web addresses than ever before.

Make the 2003 Lancaster Farming Agriculture Directory your decision-maker source for the more than $50 billion regional ag industry.

Plan Now To Be Represented In This Directory!

Garst Announces New Alfalfa Varieties

SLATER, Iowa — Garst Seed Company announces three new alfalfa products for the 2003 crop year. As with the rest of the Garst alfalfa lineup, this year's new products boast high yields and persistence with added bonuses.

"We're prepared to bring on three new products for 2003. The three demonstrate our broad range of products to fit the alfalfa markets," said Phil Kunz, Garst alfalfa product manager.

First, a new fifth-generation PLH variety, Garst 6325, has the highest potato leafhopper resistance level in the industry. Its excellent winter survival and forage quality mixed with its ability to withstand most diseases make it an outstanding variety for customers looking for high performance.

The ability to withstand the high amount of traffic that many fields face is the newest quality built into Garst 6400HT alfalfa. The new variety has a high tolerance to wheel traffic. Kunz notes the growing interest in the area of alfalfa varieties with higher levels of tolerance to wheel traffic.

"Universities have begun picking this up in their trials, which signifies the reality that there isn't a field out there without traffic on it. Garst 6400HT is designed to withstand traffic, making it a good choice for growers with wheel traffic concerns," Kunz noted.

Garst 6530-variety alfalfa is a new semi dormant variety that produces high yields for western and southern markets. When compared to other semi dormant alfalfas, it is unequaled in winter survival and persistence. It guarantees higher yields with less risk due to its resistance to seedling diseases, lesions, pea aphids and stem nematode along with its fast recovery time.

"We are very excited about the current alfalfa product interest. Grower demand this past year has been very good, and with hay prices hanging in there, we hope demand hangs in there too," said Kunz. "I'm also excited about the release of these three new Garst alfalfa varieties. The release of the new products reaffirms our position and the strength of our lineup that we offer our customers. They also illustrate that we are committed to bringing out 'leading edge' products that our customers demand."

Claas Jaguar® 900 Self-Propelled Forage Harvester Sets World Record

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Claas of America announced recently that the Claas Jaguar® 900 self-propelled forage harvester set the world record for chopping the most material with a pickup in a 12-hour period. On April 26, between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., the Jaguar 900 outfitted with a 3.80 HD pick-up harvested 2,058 tons of forage which is equivalent to over 170 tons per hour.

The tonnage harvested set the world record for harvesting the most forage in a 12-hour period with a hay pickup and set a new world record. Claas has submitted its record to The Guinness Book of Records.

Bob Armstrong, Claas of America sales manager, provided the motivation for the world record breaking attempt. Frank Netto, a custom contractor from the San Joaquin Valley in California, supplied the Claas 900 forage harvester and all of the transport logistics for the attempt. A Claas self-propelled Jaguar 860 forage harvester outfitted with a Class Disco 8500C mower and a Class Liner 3000 rake were used to mow and rake the crop for this attempt.

Commenting on the world record, Armstrong said, "I knew the 900 was an exceptional machine. I had wanted to put it to the test to show the world what it could do. We did it. We set the record."

Give Thanks to the Lord

K.J.V. Psalm 107:1

At an early age, children are taught to say "thank you" when they are given something. Parents try to instill in their children the feeling of being grateful and the importance of acknowledging when someone does something good for them. Children learn by our example as well as our words, and they are quick to imitate their parents' habits. Thanking those who have been good or helpful to us is common courtesy. We should also be expressing our appreciation to God for his many blessings. Recognizing God as our sustaining source of life, and being appreciative of His great love will draw us closer to Him and help us to be better people. A sincere and honest "thank you" is a blessing to the giver as well as to the receiver, and it indicates that a person's good deed or helpful action was not in vain.

We at BHM Farm Equipment would like to take this time to thank the Lord for His bountiful blessings and thank everyone for their patronage and friendship.

Happy Thanksgiving

BHM FARM & LAWN EQUIP.

FSA Offers Farm Operating And Ownership Loans

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — The U.S. Department of Agricultural Farm Service Agency (FSA) offers direct and guaranteed farm ownership and operating loans to farmers who are temporarily unable to obtain commercial loans.

FSA borrowers are often beginning farmers who cannot qualify for conventional loans because they have insufficient financial resources.

FSA also assists farmers who have suffered financial setbacks from natural disasters, or whose resources are too limited to meet a conventional lender's underwriting standards.

The agency's primary goal is to help beginning farmers get established, and assist established farmers in maintaining an economically viable operation. Toward that end, FSA's loan rates and terms are usually better than what a conventional lender can offer. Present interest rates range from 3.75 percent to 6.25 percent. Operating loans are usually made with a seven-year term, while farm ownership loans can be amortized for up to 40 years.

A direct farm ownership loan can be used to purchase farmland, construct or repair building and other fixtures, and promote soil and water conservation. To be eligible for a farm ownership loan, an applicant must meet the following criteria:

1. Have participated in the business operation of a farm or ranch for at least three years.

2. Does not own a farm greater than 30 percent of the average sized farm in the county in which he/she resides.

3. If the applicant is a business entity (e.g. a corporation, partnership, limited liability company, etc.), all members must be related by blood or marriage, and all stock holders in a corporation must be eligible beginning farmers or rancher.

A direct operating loan may be used to purchase items needed for a successful farm operation, such as livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fuel, chemicals, insurance and other operation expenses. They can also be used to pay for minor improvements to buildings, and refinance existing farm-related operating debt. To be eligible for a farm operating loan, a farmer or rancher must be an individual or entity who:

1. Applicant must have sufficient applicable educational and/or on the job training or farm experience in managing and operating a farm or ranch for one full year's complete production and marketing cycle within the last five years.

In addition to specific loan eligibility requirements, the following are a list of general requirements that must be met to be eligible for a direct loan from FSA:

1. Applicant must be a U.S. citizen or legal resident alien.

2. Must be of legal age to incur the obligations of the loan.

3. Be unable to get credit elsewhere.

4. Have an acceptable credit history.

5. Be the operator or tenant operator of a family farm after the loan is closed.

6. Have not received a previous loan, which resulted in a loss to the agency.

7. Must not be delinquent on any federal debt.

For further information interested parties may contact USDA Farm Service Agency at (570) 622-1555.

Major Revision Made To Software To Assist In Land Rental Decisions

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The implementation of the 2002 Farm Bill adds new wrinkles into many aspects of American agriculture. One such aspect is how a farmer approaches land rental negotiations. The latest upgrade to FairRent, a software decision aid, helps producers enter into the maze of considerations that make up a land rental decision and exit with a well thought out plan.

FairRent is developed and supported by the Center for Farm Financial Management, University of Minnesota, the developers of a number of farm management software tools including FINPACK and Marketeer.

"There it little doubt that the 2002 Farm Bill upped the ante for what goes into a thought process of land rental decisions.' says Kevin Klair, Extension Farm Management Economist at the Center. "The question both producers and landowners are asking is whether the Farm Bill justifies higher land rents. To answer this question, you must be able to determine direct payments and factor in loan deficiency and counter-cyclical payment thresholds for the parcel under consideration."

FairRent retails for $95. For more information, write to the Center for Farm Financial Management, 130 Classroom Office Building, 1994 Buford Ave., St. Paul, MN 55108, or call (800) 234-1111, or visit them on the Web at www.cffm.umn.edu.

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:

- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.

Dairying In Tennessee Offers Challenges, Benefits

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

SPRINGFIELD, Tenn. — Jack Fritz was born and raised on a dairy farm near Lampeter in Lancaster County. He was herd manager there until 5½ years ago, when he and his family packed up and moved to the more spacious open land and rolling hills of north-central Tennessee.

Fritz, his wife Carol, and sons Seth and Colin, now ages 12 and 9, started dairying near Springfield in the spring of 1997. They took along the Lancaster herd of 150 Holsteins, setting up their operation on a 400-acre farm purchased by Jack's parents, Harold and Doris Fritz.

A lot of agriculture happens in the area around the Fritz dairy, situated in Robertson County near the Kentucky border and about a 45-minute drive from Nashville. Most of the production here is corn, wheat, and soybeans with a relatively low concentration of dairy farms.

"It's a mini Grain Belt," Fritz said. Most of the surrounding land is flat, with no mountains in sight.

"Every once in a while you'll see a rolling farm — that's the way ours is."

The landscape has a quite a few less houses than in Lancaster County, and development is happening at a slow pace, making it the kind of place Fritz enjoys.

"This area is more like Lancaster County back in the 1970s," he said. "I really like it here."

Since making the move, the Fritzes have expanded the herd to about 220 cows, including eight Jerseys, milking in a 20-unit New Zealand swing-style parlor. They raise about 75 heifer calves a year for replacements and are also able to sell some stock for dairy purposes.

The Fritzes focus on growing forages, both for wet-wrapping and grazing. These include orchardgrass, clover, alfalfa, perennial ryegrass, fescue, and natural crabgrass, as well as sudangrass and annual rye. They also grow about 50 acres of corn for silage. Jack Fritz estimated about 25 percent of the herd's forage needs come from grazing.

The forages go into a total mixed ration with corn, cottonseed meal, citrus pulp, soybean meal and hulls, corn gluten meal, and fish meal plus energy and mineral supplements. Fritz also mixes in a unique Tennessee by-product — corn distiller's grain from Jack Daniel's Distillery in Lynchburg.

Like Pennsylvania and many other areas, Tennessee suffered a drought this summer.

"It stopped raining May 25th and started up again in late September," Fritz said. "It was the worst year for hay I've ever had. I had to buy a lot of alfalfa from neighbors."

Fritz was able to beat some of the dry conditions by irrigating his corn crop this summer, with good results.

"We ended up having super corn silage," he said.

The droughty summer is being followed by a wet fall, including heavy rains earlier this month from the same storm system that brought deadly tornadoes to parts of the state.

The Fritzes have discovered there are both advantages and challenges to dairying in Tennessee.

The warmer climate is ideal for the highly-productive "Marshall" variety of annual rye, as well as perennial ryegrasses such as "Winter Magic."

"Compared to Pennsylvania, the rye and ryegrass are far superior," Fritz said.

The annual rye is seeded in the fall and grazed into November, then again from February to May. Fritz then follows the rye with corn or sudangrass.

Having adequate grain sources nearby is a benefit when it comes to buying feed. Because of lower trucking expenses, Fritz estimates he pays about 40 to 50 cents per bushel less for corn than Pennsylvania farmers do.

Tennessee milk prices at the farm have historically been higher than those in Pennsylvania. This is because a higher portion of the milk from Fritz's area goes for Class I (fluid) use — about 63 percent, he estimated.

A recent series of milk company mergers and new marketing associations, though, is putting that price advantage in jeopardy, according to Fritz. The buyout of Nashville-based Purity Dairies by Dean Foods and the subsequent merger of Dean and Suiza is resulting in more milk coming into the area from the north.

"I was happy until this merger," he said. "We always got a dollar more (than Pennsylvania producers per hundredweight) before."

The Fritzes responded by switching to another dairy cooperative in early October. Their milk is now shipped to Murfreesboro, south of Nashville, where it is handled by the Texas-based Lone Star Cooperative.

Fritz said, "It's too early to tell," whether or not the change prove to be an advantage.

The warm, humid Tennessee climate is a mixed blessing.

Fritz's cows can often begin grazing as early as February, thanks to the mild winters and scant snowfall.

Summer heat and humidity, on the other hand, make it harder to keep the cows healthy, which can increase production costs.

"The heat brings everything on," Fritz said, referring to foot problems and other ailments that can shorten the life span of the cows. The heat and humid-

SERVING AGRICULTURE

Are All Animal Operations Regulated? — Yes!

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Trying to sort through the environmental laws, policies, and programs for livestock and poultry operations could be a fulltime job in itself.

With the volume of information to absorb, it is sometimes difficult to know who is required to do what. There appears to be a misconception in the industry that an operation is regulated only if the herd contains a certain number of animals or animal units. This is not the case. All Pennsylvania operations that produce, store or apply manure are regulated under the state's Clean Streams Law. The following are a description of practices that livestock operations should adhere to and that are enforceable.

All Operations (AO)

Since 1977, all farmers handling animal waste have been required to follow the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection's (DEP) "Manure Management for Environmental Protection" and "Field Application of Manure" manuals.

Farmers not following the manure management requirements and practices are required to obtain DEP approval or a water quality permit. The manure management manual describes practices which provide environmental protection. Some of the areas covered include: safety and emergency response for manure management systems; planning, design, and construction of manure management systems; operation and maintenance of manure management systems; manure management strategies to control flies; manure application methods, timing and rates; manure management on environmentally sensitive areas; and managing excess manure.

These publications can be obtained by contacting your conservation district, certified nutrient management specialist, cooperative extension office or the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). They are also available on the web at: http://panutrientmgmt.cas.psu.edu/ (Click on "Technical Resources").

All Pennsylvania farmers plowing or tilling are required to control erosion from their fields with either an implemented conservation plan or an erosion and sedimentation control plan meeting Pennsylvania Chapter 102 Erosion and Sediment Control Regulations.

The plan should include plan maps, soils maps, drainage patterns and a description of best management practices (BMPs) including tillage systems, schedules, and cost effective and technically practical conservation measures. The advantage of updating a farm's plan is that it provides an indirect way to reduce nitrogen and phosphorus losses to water resources by controlling erosion and sediment.

ity also makes it harder to control somatic cell counts.

When not grazing or being milked, the cows are housed in a loafing area bedded with sawdust. The barn is equipped with a movable curtain on the north side for winter protection. In the summertime, all four sides are open for ventilation.

Even with the added herd health challenges, the Fritzes have been able to sell cows locally for dairy purposes. Fritz figures his cows milk an average of four lactations, with a rolling herd average of 24,800 pounds of milk at 3.6 percent fat and 3.2 percent protein, using bST for the heavier producers.

That's good production for a region where dairy farming is not a major part of the economy and where support resources such as a university dairy extension and farm suppliers are harder to find.

"The extension service is not comparable (to Pennsylvania's)," Fritz said. Robertson County, however, does offer better resources than many areas in Tennessee and Kentucky, he noted.

His background and experience as a dairy farmer in Pennsylvania has gone a long way toward adapting and continuing to be successful in Tennessee. The herd has not dropped in production since making the move from Lancaster County, he said.

Another challenge of being in an area with fewer dairy farms is the need for extra cleanliness. This is because on-farm health inspections are conducted by state inspectors — not by employees of a milk cooperative as usually happens in Pennsylvania. Since the state inspectors have relatively few dairies and many restaurants to inspect, they tend to be quite strict.

In Tennessee, inspectors practically expect a dairy operation "to be like a restaurant," Fritz said. Yet, while "a lot of milk gets rejected" in the state, the Fritz dairy has so far passed all inspections.

Beside family members, the farm and dairy operation employs three fulltime workers — "really short a person" for the workload, Fritz said. Even so, the dependability of the hired help plus the involvement of Jack's parents allows the Fritz family to take a yearly one- to two-week vacation.

Parents Harold and Doris Fritz travel from Lancaster to stay on the farm for a total of about two months each year.

Are All Animal Operations Regulated? — Yes!

Concentrated Animal Operations

Farmers with operations that are defined as Concentrated Animal Operations (CAOs) under the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act or Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs) under the federal Clean Water Act must meet additional requirements.

Under state regulations, a CAO is defined as an agricultural operation where the animal density exceeds 2 animal equivalent units (2,000 pounds of live animal weight) per acre of land suitable for spreading manure. In addition to the requirements described above, CAOs must develop and implement a nitrogen-based nutrient management plan. Manure is managed based on the crops nitrogen needs. However, it is important to note Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act regulations are currently under review. Discussions suggest Pennsylvania will likely incorporate a phosphorus component into the current N-based nutrient management plan.

Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations

Under federal regulations, a CAFO is defined as an operation with greater than 1,000 animal equivalent units, or a CAO with 301-1,000 animal equivalent units, or any operation that directly discharges to surface waters. CAFOs must comply with the CAO requirements outlined above plus meet additional requirements.

Because CAFOs are considered to have a greater potential for water pollution, these operations must obtain a permit from the Pa. DEP, are subject to annual agency reviews, and must meet additional record keeping requirements. Large CAFOs (over 1,000 animal equivalent units) must meet extra requirements.

There are many changes coming in the next several months regarding regulations. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is releasing new requirements for CAFOs in December. One of the biggest changes will likely be the definition of a CAFO. Keep up with the changes and find timely information by visiting Penn State's new nutrient management Website at http://nutrient.psu.edu.

Building A Bright Future In New Mexico

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LOVINGTON, N.M. — When Alan and Sandy McCauley began estate planning a few years ago, they decided to head in a new direction.

At the time, Alan was co-owner of EmTran, the embryo transfer company in Elizabethtown, and the McCauleys managed the 60-cow Holstein and Jersey herd at the facility. On top of that, the couple was running a commercial pullet operation and raising heifers on their farm, and Sandy was working as a feed consultant. The McCauley name was also maintaining a steady presence in the dairy show circuit.

By the time Em Tran was sold last year, the McCauley new dairy plans were well in motion.

In looking for a suitable site to build a profit-sustaining dairy business, the McCauleys decided to head west. Alan traveled to states including Kansas, California, and New Mexico to research the dairy potential in each area. He was looking for favorable features such as open spaces, affordable land prices, ready feed access, and nearby milk processors.

"We both loved Lancaster County," Sandy said. "But where would we put the cows?"

In early 2000, the McCauleys settled on a 1,084-acre property in eastern New Mexico, an area boasting wide-open spaces and a dry climate favorable to cattle. Another key factor was a Dairy Farmer's of America cheese plant just 12 miles away.

Here in flat desert country, eight miles from the Texas border, the McCauleys went to work establishing New Direction Dairy.

They constructed dairy facilities in the winter of 2000-2001 and began "congregating" cows in August of last year.

Now, 15 months later, they are milking about 1,650 cows with a total of 2,100 head on the farm, including dry cows and springing heifers. The dairy has capacity to milk 3,400 head.

"Everything was built from the ground up," Sandy said. Facilities consist of 34 acres of open dry lots for the herd, a double-40 rapid-exit parallel parlor, and two 8,000-gallon milk storage silos.

Construction and startup had its share of challenges. For example, the winter of 2000-20001 was one of the worst in the recent history of New Mexico, Alan said. The extra-bad weather caused construction to take several months longer than expected.

To build the herd, the McCauleys acquired good-quality Holsteins "from all over," including Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kansas, Georgia, Texas, and Arkansas.

The first cows on the dairy were a small herd from Pennsylvania, which the family had to milk outdoors with a temporary vacuum setup for about six weeks while the parlor was being completed.

Alan's children moved to New Mexico to join the management team. Daughter Kim and her husband, Ernesto Santillanez, handle finances and manage the workforce, respectively. Alan's son, Tom, is responsible for animal health.

Alan coordinates feed purchases, which includes locally contracted corn silage and alfalfa from the region. Most of the forages and grains for the TMR are purchased, although the McCauleys are set to increase their irrigation capabilities in order to grow more corn and wheat for harvesting as forage.

The McCauleys employ about 20 workers on the farm, many of them Hispanic. The family management staff and employees add up to a highly effective crew, according to the McCauleys.

The McCauley's "bare-bones" double-40 parallel parlor in operation. At this point, it has no computer equipment, although adding automatic take-offs is a top priority on the "wish list," according to Alan.

Foreman Ernesto Santillez is fluent in Spanish and "has the patience of a saint," Sandy said. That combination makes him ideal for managing the milking operation.

"We are very, very lucky. We have absolutely wonderful help."

Sandy oversees nutrition for the New Mexico dairy while still spending much of her time in Pennsylvania. She is employed as a feed consultant for ADM in southcentral Pennsylvania and northern Maryland.

Corn silage costs about $23 per acre in the field plus $14 to harvest, haul, and bag. A custom corn harvesting crew from the area brings in the bulk of the 20,000 tons of corn silage fed in a year at New Direction Dairy.

Coming from Lancaster County, Alan said he was concerned about finding a dependable custom harvest crew in the area. He's pleased with the one he found.

"Fortunately, the guys out here have just as good a work ethic," he said.

In arid New Mexico, water rights are sold on a per-acreage basis. Along with with the land, the McCauleys also acquired 350 acres worth of water rights. That means they are allowed to draw groundwater to irrigate a maximum of 350 acres of crop land.

Without water rights, land has little value for crop production in this region, which sees about 15 inches of rain and five inches of snow a year.

In the area of Lea County, where New Direction Dairy is situated, water rights cost about $400 per acre. Open land, without water rights, sells for $100-200 per acre, Alan said.

One irrigation "pivot" system covers 100 to 125 acres. This year, the McCauleys had one pivot in place to irrigate the corn they harvested for silage. According to Alan, they plan to install two more pivot systems. He hopes to purchase another 80 acres of water rights to cover the supply for the dairy animals.

"Water is one of the key issues," Alan said. "Water is basically one of the things I worry about the most."

Each township in New Mexico is allotted a certain share of water rights, while water in nearby Texas is still handled strictly as a private commodity. This gives Texas landowners the right to draw as much water as they can from their property. Because both states draw water from some of the same underground sources, the issue has created some disputes between them.

At this point, the McCauleys are focusing on establishing the milking herd and are raising no calves on the farm.

"From a cash-flow standpoint, we need to get through the startup phase," Alan said. "I've got some reliable sources (for replacements and building the herd) right now."

Once the milking facilities are full, Alan said he might consider feeding replacement heifers.

The cows on the dairy have been averaging about 70 pounds of milk on twice-a-day milking, and "are very healthy and breeding back" with a cull rate between 15 and 20 percent, Sandy said. The low humidity and dry climate help make a good home for the cows.

"All in all, the cattle do very well," she said. "They are very, very comfortable."

While the corrals usually provide a dry, roomy area for the cows, they can also become a problem during wet periods, Alan noted.

"The weather drives me nuts," he said, remembering an earlier string of misty, foggy days that made the lots anything but dry.

On the other hand, the low cost and easy maintenance of an open corral system compared to a freestall barn make it one of the major benefits of dairying in New Mexico.

The McCauleys recently switched to milking three times a day, with the short-term goal of boosting production to 75 pounds per cow per day, Alan said. About 1,200 of the milking cows receive bST.

DFA hauls two tractor-trailer loads — about 110,000 pounds — of milk from the farm each day. The portion that goes for Class I utilization is similar to that in the Northeast, usually ranging between 40 and 50 percent.

Mailbox milk prices, though, generally run slightly lower than they do in Pennsylvania. One reason is that producers in New Mexico and west Texas are subject to a 90 cent per hundredweight hauling penalty.

Why the penalty? McCauley said he has been trying to find an answer to that question. "It's probably political," he said.

The McCauleys aim to overcome any such disadvantages through good team management, economy of scale, and by making the most of New Mexico's favorable dairy features.

Operating under the slim milk price/feed cost ratio that has characterized the U.S. dairy industry in the past months, the McCauleys are facing big challenges, just like other producers across the country.

With its family management team, quality workforce, and the bright prospects of New Mexico, the McCauley dairy is likely see it through.

Spungold Tahoe Gains World Attention At Expo

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Dale and Deanna Bendig of Spungold Holsteins began showing dairy animals when they were little kids in 4-H.

Deanna grew up in Bradford County, Dale in Carroll County, Md. With a background in black and white Holsteins, they probably never dreamed they would one day show the grand champion Red & White cow at the World Dairy Expo in Wisconsin. That's what happened this October when Spungold Tahoe-Red topped the Grand International Red & White Show.

The couple from Gettysburg got into show-quality Red & Whites "pretty much by chance," according to Dale Bendig. About eight years ago, they purchased Tahoe's dam, Meadow View Leader Lottie-Red.

Tahoe was produced by a fortunate cross between Lottie and Indianhead Red Marker-ET-RC, a famous red carrier sire from Wisconsin.

"It's just luck if you get a red one," Deanna said of crossing Holsteins when one or both of them is only a carrier of the red trait. The only way to be certain of a red offspring is if both parents are red. In Tahoe's case, with the red dam and red carrier sire, there was a 50/50 chance she turn out red.

Tahoe began to excel early, being named top All-American as a winter calf in the Holstein show at Harrisburg. She also won All-American honorable mention as a winter yearling, and reserve champion All-American as a 2-year-old.

But this year marked the crowning point of Tahoe's achievements to date. As a senior 3-year-old, she was selected grand champion and best udder at the Red & White for Blue In 2002 show in Belvidere, Ill., before going on to win at the World Dairy Expo.

Tahoe is classified EX-93 with an EX-93 mammary and turns 4 years old on Christmas day. She will have a break from the show circuit in 2003.

"She's going to take a year off and be flushed," Dale said. So far, her offspring includes a black and white heifer and a bull, both sired by red carrier Rubens from a 2001 flushing. The young bull has already been sold to a buyer in California.

At this point, the Bendigs' herd is made up of about 70 milking Holsteins, including five Red & Whites. The couple spends their time taking care of the cows and replacement heifers, leaving fieldwork to others. They purchase alfalfa and timothy hay from neighbors. On their own 79-acre farm and rented land, custom operators grow and harvest corn silage for them.

This allows the couple to focus their energy and time on what they know and like best: tending and showing cows. Dale said they are not interested in any large expansion that would take time away from individual cow care.

"We like our cows too much for them to be machines," he said.

The latest Spungold Holstein rolling herd average stands at 24,227 pounds of milk, 888 pounds of fat, and 720 of protein. Tahoe is projected to produce more than 30,000 pounds of milk this lactation.

Other recent highlights for the Bendigs on the show circuit include exhibiting the 2001 grand champion Brown Swiss, 11-year-old Shen-Val Jades Cara, at the Eastern National Show in Harrisburg and the Royal Winter Fair in Canada.

This year they also exhibited the All-Pennsylvania Holstein spring yearling, reserve All-Pennsylvania winter yearling, and reserve all-Pennsylvania junior best three females.

At the World Dairy Expo this year, Tahoe was top in a total show of 231 Red & Whites, including calves and heifers. The judge was David Dyment of Ontario.

Dairylea Honors High Quality Milk Producers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative, Inc. honored member producers with top quality milk through the 2001-2002 Milk Quality Management Award Program at its annual meeting Oct. 15 and 16 in Liverpool, NY.

For the past 18 years, Dairylea's quality program has recognized members who produce outstanding raw milk. Each month, milk samples from every Dairylea member farm are tested based on industry criteria, including somatic cell count of 300,000 or less, no added water, no growth inhibitors, and no off flavor, odor or questionable appearance.

Dairylea member farms honored this year are:

- Charles and Beth Bartels, Meshoppen;
- Brabant Farm Partnership, Verona, N.Y.;
- Louis and Lois DesJardins, Munnsville, N.Y.;
- Harkdale Farms, Inc., Newbury, Vt.;
- William and Allan Shoemaker, New Woodstock, N.Y.;
- James & Donna Walker, Susquehanna;
- Willett Farms, Inc., Hunt, N.Y., and
- Kenneth R. Wood, South Dayton, N.Y.

Members receiving recognition attributed their high quality results to placing importance on cleanliness, consistent milking procedures, and cow comfort.

"We are extremely proud of our Milk Quality Management Award recipients," said Clyde Rutherford, Dairylea president. "These members consistently demonstrate sound management and dedication to producing the best possible product."

The Milk Quality Management Award Program includes all Dairylea Cooperative members and member cooperative farms. Final rankings are based on the lowest index derived in the nine measurements.

Family Dairies GM Visits Holstein Convention Host Farm

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

MOUNT HOREB, Wis. — Like many dairy cooperative managers, Richard Klossner, general manager of Family Dairies USA, is waiting on USDA/FSA to work out the details of the Farm Bill.

Meanwhile, this past June, Richard and his family took some time "off," if that's possible in dairying, for a summer tour during the Host Day picnic at Cedar Lane Farm in Oldwick, N.J.

Klossner, with his own dairy in Mount Horeb, visited the host day picnic with wife Roxanne and daughter Kristin, 15, and son John, 8.

"We have a lot of new operations in Wisconsin," said Klossner. "It's really building up."

Klossner noted that Family Dairies USA, based in Madison, Wis., about 35 miles away from Mount Horeb, is the eighth largest dairy cooperative in the country. (Number one in milk pounds shipped is Dairy Farmers of America in Kansas City, Mo., with 36.4 billion pounds from 16,900 member farms. Number 2 is California Dairies, Inc., Los Banos, Calif., with only 695 member farms shipping 13.6 billion pounds.)

Family Dairies USA, established in the 1970s, was the answer to a perceived threat from three new super co-ops that tried to acquire small private and co-op dairies, according to Family Dairies USA information. The original name, Farmers Union Milk Marketing Cooperative, was changed in September 1998 to Family Dairies USA to more "clearly reflect its independent status," according to the cooperative.

Family Dairies USA ships about 5.10 billion pounds per year from 5,713 members. Producers are from Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Idaho.

Some bargains to joining this independent cooperative:

- A low 2.25 cent checkoff. Patronage dividend allocations to members have actually reduced the checkoff to about a cent.
- Family Dairies USA has led efforts to stop harmful proposals to legalize the use of imported casein and nondairy ingredients in natural cheese.
- Component test verification. Producer-members run the cooperative, and each pay period a licensed milk tester verifies component test and reports the results on a timely basis.
- Insurance benefits include health, business liability and employee, dental, debt protection, long-term care, income protection, estate and retirement planning, and auto, home, and farm.
- Family Dairies USA Scholarship Program, in its fifth year, provides eight $500 scholarships.

The cooperative offers members a choice of two cattle collection yards in eastern Wisconsin. The cattle are marketed through Packerland Packing Company in Green Bay, Wis. and Emmpak Packing Company in Milwaukee, Wis.

Klossner, a director from district three, said the cooperative has six full-time office staff and six field staff.

Quality programs that pay include low SCC, encompassing premiums for low bacterial count, and payment of normal federal order premiums.

Klossner noted some of the benefits of the Farm Bill, including extension of the $9.90 support price through Dec. 31, 2007. Klossner said, "While the Farm Bill doesn't solve all the problems in dairy, such as the ever-growing importation of milk proteins and butterfat, the Farm Bill's addition of a countercyclical payment program gives us a new safety net to help distressed producers when prices plummet."

In May this year, equities totaling $332.499.69 were paid back to members. More than 8,671 members received their share of the equity.

More information can be obtained by visiting the Website, www.fdusa.org, or by phone at (608) 244-3373.

Upcoming: The Family Dairies USA annual delegate meeting will be conducted at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center in Green Bay, Wis., Feb. 14-15, 2003.

DairyCOP$: Measure It, Manage It

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — When it comes to running a dairy farm, "you have to be able to measure it to manage it," said Brad Hilty, senior extension associate with Penn State Dairy Alliance.

DairyCOP$, or Dairy Cost of Production Analyzer, could be just the tool.

Hilty spoke to several dairy producers during a DairyCOP$ Workshop for dairy owners and operators in early November at the Farm and Home Center.

The DairyCOP$ program is simple: how much does it cost a dairy farmer to produce 100 pounds of milk?

Hilty noted that there are several key items to the program. A producer needs to look at the feed, a "big chunk of the production cost," he noted, in addition to labor and overhead.

Those elements are inputted via computer to a spreadsheet. Producers can compare, through the DairyCOP$ program, how they fare compared to other producers.

One spreadsheet example looked at how Lancaster County dairy farmers were doing. "They can look at the weak spots in the operation, or the strong points, and see how they're doing," said Hilty.

The problem with many farms is, according to Hilty, that they are "data rich but info poor," he said.

Taking data about cost of input production and turning it into something to improve the bottom dollar takes time, but those steps along the way can be accomplished with DairyCOP$.

A pre-conference Farming With Technology Conference was conducted earlier this week near Adamstown that also examined many of the same processes at the DairyCOP$ workshop at the Farm and Home Center.

DairyCOP$ is part of the Busines$ense Management Training for Dairy CFO Program. Hilty noted Busines$ense is a three-day workshop that looks at several components, including profiles of successful dairy businesses, benchmarks and measurement, and a complete dairy farm business summary.

DairyCOP$ is the second session, looking into cost of production information to match the cost of the production model.

The DairyCOP$ methodology should be employed on a monthly basis for farm managers, noted Hilty.

The big component of the third, and final part of the management training for dairy chiefs: take a look at strengths and weaknesses to improve return on assets, and look to see if some decisions are good investment management strategies or perhaps poor input management.

Six farms were signed up at the conference in Lancaster in early November. Sign-up is limited to 12-15 farms per location to allow for good interaction.

Herds can range in size from 20 to 700 cows, according to Hilty. One herd measured 500 cows at the Lancaster event.

At the spreadsheet/benchmark portion of a session conducted earlier, 24 farms were summarized. The ones making the most profit: one did not have a lot of machinery and the other leased most of the land. The amount of variation on how farm managers conducted their business differed in many aspects, as did the net income from the farms.

Busines$ense/DairyCOP$ programs for 2003 are planned.

Dairy Operators Sharpen 'Calf Sense' At Workshop

DAVE LEFEVER

NEWBURG (Franklin Co.) — People blessed with "cow sense" are those with a knack for noticing when an animal is sick or not quite up to par. This applies to newborn calves as much as it applies to cows.

Detecting unhealthy animals is a skill that can be learned, according to Penn State dairy team members leading a recent "calf sense" workshop at Beidel Brothers Dairy here.

The best way to develop calf sense is by learning how healthy calves behave.

"The first thing you want to identify is the healthy animal," said John Stoner, a veterinarian from Shippensburg who joined Penn State's extension dairy team members Arlen Mills, Judd Heinrich, and Richard Stup in leading the workshop.

The day included lessons on identifying and treating sick calves, using a colostrometer to determine the quality of the antibody-rich milk fed to newborn calves, and developing standard operating procedures for consistent calf care.

Healthy calves are curious and active — even frisky, Stoner said. More importantly, healthy calves are hungry. When a calf loses interest in eating, that's a sure sign of problems.

"If they've got an appetite, that means there's hope," Stoner said.

Good colostrum management and proper ventilation are crucial to avoiding respiratory problems and getting newborn calves off to a healthy start, according to Dr. Arlen Mills, extension veterinarian.

"The respiratory system is the 'achilles heel' of the bovine species," Mills said, referring to the susceptibility of cattle to lung damage. In the event of needing antibiotics or other products to treat respiratory problems, he recommended using those that leave the least amount of scar tissue and adhesions in the lungs.

Mills also demonstrated how to check for dehydration, a problem often caused by scours.

Mills cautioned producers against the overuse of certain antibiotics which "kill the good bugs as well as the bad bugs" in the digestive system.

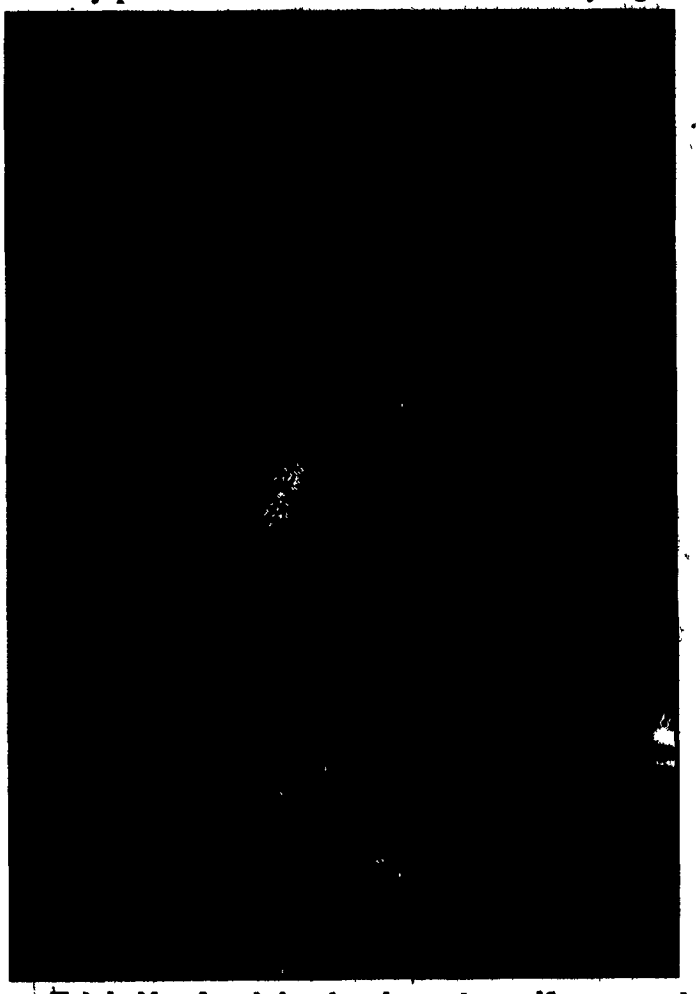
Managing colostrum, the cow's first milk after calving, was the focus of part of the workshop led by Dr. Judd Heinrichs, Penn State extension dairy nutritionist. Colostrum is rich in antibodies and nutrients that newborn calves need to thrive.

Calves need to feed on high-quality colostrum as soon as possible after birth. They lose their ability to absorb its vital antibodies after their second feeding, normally eight to 12 hours after birth, Heinrich said. He recommended feeding "transition milk" after the initial colostrum feedings and before switching to milk replacer.

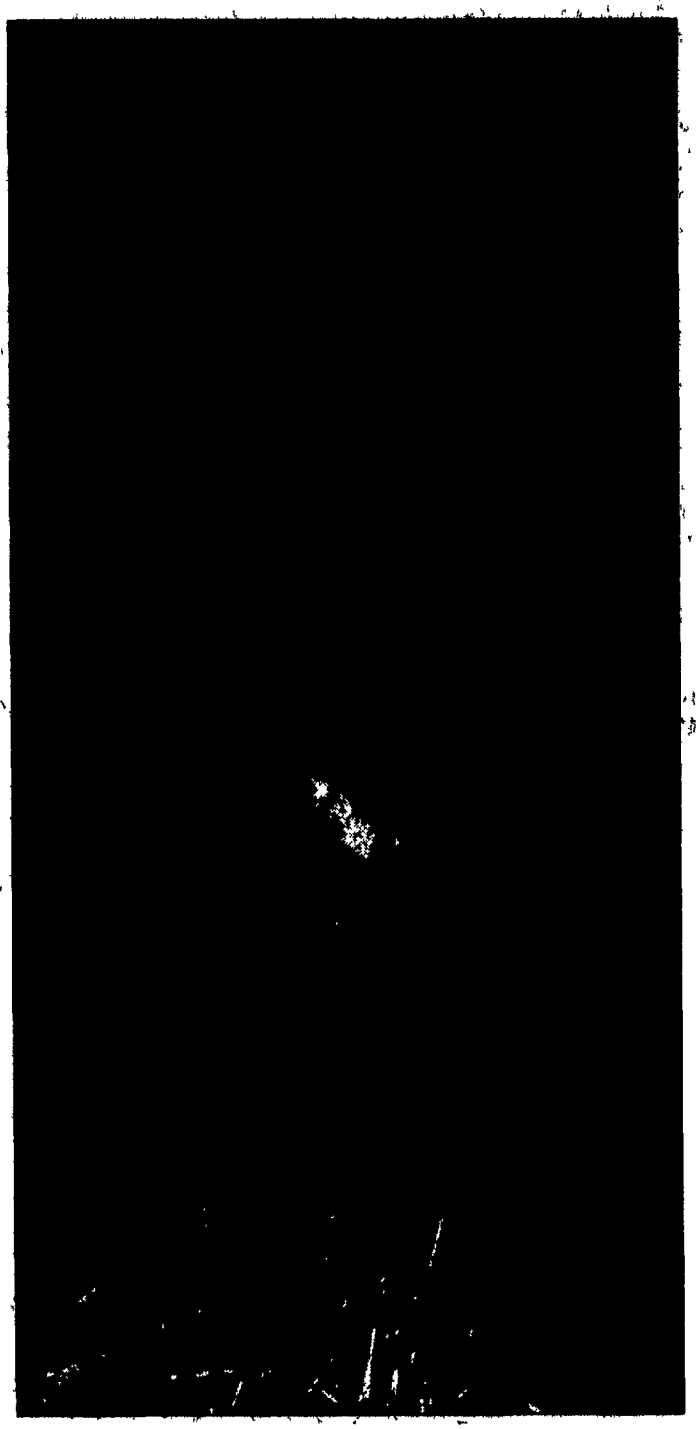
When it comes to colostrum, "the thicker the better, and the darker the better," Heinrich told the group. The thickness and deep yellow/orange color indicate the presence of immunoglobulins — or antibodies.

Heinrich demonstrated the simple task of using a colostrometer, a tubular glass device that indicates immunoglobulin levels by the depth at which it floats in a sample of colostrum.

Many producers are able to use their own eyesight and judgement to tell whether or not colostrum is good, Heinrich said. But when herds expand and more employees become responsible for feeding calves, a standard way of determining colostrum quality becomes more important.



Trixie VanArsdale checks out a calf rumen at the Calf Sense workshop.



Arlen Mills demonstrates how to pinch a calf's skin to check for dehydration.

"Especially if you have employees, you need (a colostrometer)," Heinrich said.

Some dairy managers with smaller herds like to use a colostrometer as well, he said. As with many tools of the trade, it is often a matter of personal preference.

(Turn to Page 27)

Dairy Operators Sharpen

"Some people use them religiously, others use them when they have a problem," he said.

Another important aspect of colostrum management, Heinrich said, is controlling bacteria that grows rapidly in the nutrient-rich milk, even when refrigerated. Colostrum with high levels of bacteria can contribute to problems like scours. For this reason, he recommended discarding colostrum more than 12 hours old, unless it is frozen.

Heinrich recommended freezing colostrum to have it on hand for emergency situations.

"Having some frozen colostrum is almost a necessity to me," he said. It should be put in the freezer as soon as possible after it comes out of the cow.

"If you're going to freeze colostrum, do it right away," Heinrich said.

Richard Stup of Penn State's Dairy Alliance led discussions on the need for written standard operating procedures (SOPs) for calf management and other tasks on the dairy.

Manage Loafing Areas

M. Beth Grove
Lancaster Dairy/
Environmental Agent

As a newcomer to Lancaster, one of the striking differences I've noticed between this area and my home state of Virginia is the high number of tie stall barns in the county.

Whether cows are housed in a traditional tie stall barn or in a freestall facility, many farmers allow the milking cows out onto grass or dirt lots for short periods of time. These lots are important management tools, allowing for easier heat detection and cow exercise. The lots also ease the stress of standing on concrete for cows in the herd.

Unfortunately, these lots can cause significant environmental problems. Heavy cow traffic and constant use often cause the grass lots to be completely stripped of vegetation, except for unwanted weeds. Rain hitting the bare soil can cause significant runoff, resulting in soil erosion. Soil erosion is a serious environmental problem as it wears away the land's surface and de-

(Turn to Page 29)

"You dairy farmers totally underestimate how complex your job is," he said.

While smaller dairies can benefit from SOPs, "large operations don't have a choice," Stup said. On operations where various employees are feeding newborn calves, for example, a written standard should be in place for using a colostrometer, ensuring all calves get what they need for a good start.

Dairy farmer Doug Smith, Bedford County, affirmed the need for SOPs. He said he uses them consistently on his operation.

"I have everything written — this is the way I want it done," he said.

His SOPs, however, are not set in stone.

"I'm always changing them," Smith said. "I'm more than willing to listen to (employees) if they have a better way."

Stup agreed. "The right way to use SOPs is not as a club. The purpose is to reduce variability from one person to another."

Brothers Wayne and Brad Beidel, hosted the workshop on their farm. Wayne Beidel's sons, Curtis and Dale, also help on the dairy. The family milks about 130 Holsteins.

stroys our soil resources. Did you know it takes approximately 100-150 years to make one inch of topsoil? And as cow lots are often a natural collection site for manure and urine, surface water run-off can be a nitrogen and bacteria pollution source to surrounding waterways.

Dirt or partial-grass paddocks can also cause serious problems with environmental mastitis during the winter and other periods of wet weather.

There is an alternative for your dairy operation — a "dairy rotational loafing lot system," originally developed in Virginia, which helps protect areas exposed to heavy livestock traffic from excessive manure and soil losses.

The system consists of three grass paddocks and a sacrifice lot, sized to the herd. The paddocks allow the producer to rotate the herd through the lots as needed to maintain a grass cover. Travel lanes connect the barn to the different lots; farms with tie-stall barns may use their barns as the "sacrifice" area. The sacrifice area is where the herd is kept during wet or icy weather, or when the vegetative growth is insufficient. Using the grass lots during these times would destroy or damage the sod. The paddocks should be created to allow cows to walk on the contour of the field, rather than up and down steep slopes.

The establishment of a vigorous, thick sod is vital to withstand heavy livestock traffic. The grass paddocks are seeded with 50-75 pounds per acre of endophyte-infected Kentucky 31 tall fescue. (Remember, these paddocks are not for grazing, although they may be clipped for hay.) Although other grasses and mixes have been tried, nothing works as well as the fescue to tie the soil down and withstand heavy cow traffic. Soil types, paddock slope, exposure, and time of planting are all important to establishing a good sod. The sacrifice lots and grass paddocks should have adequate slope (3-10 percent to provide for drainage).

A good rule of thumb in sizing the rotational lots is to allow for 20-25 cows per acre in each paddock; thus, a 50-cow herd would need three paddocks of two acres each. In very tight situations, or on farms with very fertile soil and good drainage, 30 cows per acre may suffice. It is a good idea, although not always practical, to provide water in the paddocks for the herd.

What are the advantages of such a system? There are many, including:

Dairy Production Medicine Program Enhances Herd Health, Profits

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences educational program for practicing veterinarians is contributing to healthier herds — and healthier bottom lines.

The Dairy Production Medicine certificate program, offered by the college's veterinary science department, graduated its fourth class of animal health practitioners earlier this year. A recent survey reveals that what the veterinarians learned in the course is making a positive difference in their practices and in the dairy operations they serve.

"The program is designed to teach and reinforce herd performance medicine, as opposed to the more traditional individual animal care that most people learn in veterinary school," said David Wolfgang, Penn State extension veterinarian and senior research associate in veterinary science. "Individual care still is important. But herd care and production medicine require different skills and knowledge that often is best learned and applied after some years of clinical experience."

Wolfgang said the typical veterinarian in the program has been in private practice between eight and 15 years. The class of 2002 consisted of 20 practitioners from seven states.

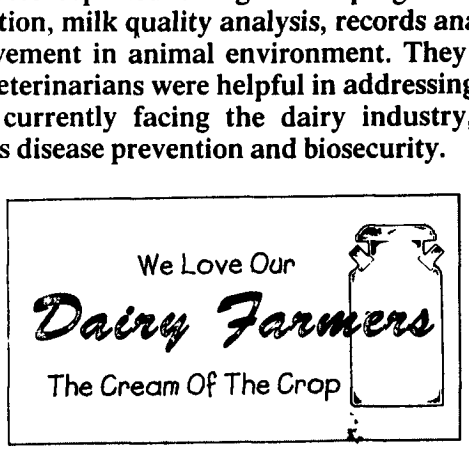
"With their training and experience, they realize that to make the greatest impact on animal health and farm profitability, they need to become more proactive and prevent problems or eliminate production-limiting conditions," he said. "Typically, these areas involve interactions between the animals and their environment, nutrition and management."

Dairy producers surveyed said that as a result of the program, fewer unscheduled visits by their veterinarians were required to deal with herd health problems. Producers reported the greatest progress in forage evaluation, milk quality analysis, records analysis and improvement in animal environment. They also said their veterinarians were helpful in addressing complex issues currently facing the dairy industry, such as Johne's disease prevention and biosecurity.

"These improvements translated into higher productivity and profitability through reduced feed costs, higher milk yields, reduced somatic cell counts, premium bonuses on milk and increased pregnancy rate," Wolfgang said. "For instance, one producer reported that he was able to reduce purchased feed costs by $80 per ton. Another reported that milk yield increased eight pounds per cow in only two months."

Veterinarians reported that by implementing concepts learned in the course, they were able to reduce the number of emergency calls from clients by 20 percent. Graduates said proactive, preventive health care programs to address mastitis and milk quality problems and to improve reproductive performance and heifer health also increased significantly.

The Dairy Production Medicine program is offered in 10, three-day modules over a three-year period. Wolfgang said Penn State is accepting inquiries from veterinarians interested in enrolling in the next round of the program. For more information, contact Wolfgang by phone at (814) 863-5849 or by e-mail at drw12@psu.edu.



Loafing Areas

• Reduced soil and nutrient loss — The loafing lot system helps prevent excessive nutrient runoff to above and below ground water sources.

• Improved foot health — Manure, urine, and concrete work together to erode the soft tissue of the hoof. The grass lots help clean and dry the cow's hoof.

• Milk Quality and Cow Cleanliness — Cows that rest in clean, grassy areas are less likely to contract environmental mastitis, and they will come into the milk barn with cleaner udders.

• Mowing and Hay — The paddocks should be bushhogged to maintain growth and promote sod vigor. In years of plentiful rainfall, some producers graze heifers and/or dry cows on in the paddocks. Harvesting hay is also a good practice when possible as it "mines" the nutrients from the soils and makes good heifer hay.

• Farm Appearance — What could be more beautiful than a herd of healthy cows on lush grass fields? Muddy lots and dirty cows send the wrong message to the general public about agriculture.

Holstein USA Offers Service Package

Dairy PLUS Business News

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Holstein COMPLETE is a comprehensive new package being offered by Holstein Association USA for today's progressive Registered Holstein breeders. Holstein COMPLETE is designed for members already taking advantage of Holstein Association's services and provides members with the ability to simplify accounting while accelerating the genetic progress of their herd on an annual basis.

Holstein COMPLETE integrates registration, classification, production records, genetic reports, pedigrees, and sire summaries in one unique program. These products are still available individually, but the combination of services will provide both convenience and cost savings for the typical registered Holstein breeder.

"By packaging these programs, we are able to offer savings to our loyal members using our association's products," said Ted Kuchinski, treasurer, Holstein Association USA.

Holstein COMPLETE not only simplifies budgeting, it also shields users from price increases in core services such as registration. Holstein COMPLETE has a component that enables participants to lock in a lower registration rate for all heifers registered under three months of age.

"Herds enrolled in Holstein COMPLETE will save because the package's fees are based on the $6 registration fee," Kuchinski said.

Holstein COMPLETE will launch in January for the 2003 calendar year. However, members can enroll today. If you would like to learn more about Holstein COMPLETE, please contact your local regional representative or call customer service at (800) 952-5200.

Milk Promotion Activities Focus On Moms, Kids

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) continues to work hard at promoting milk and milk products, according to the chief executive of the regional organization based in Syracuse, N.Y.

Richard Naczi spoke to about 40 dairy farmers and family members at a District 18 ADADC membership meeting at Yoders Restaurant here Nov. 6. The meeting was one of a series taking place this fall throughout all ADADC districts in New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

The 'Got Milk' campaign has shifted away from targeting adult consumers in general to focusing on kids and mothers. That trend will continue in 2003, Naczi said.

In one method of reaching out to children, ADADC has been at work partnering with school food programs in New York and New Jersey to provide vending machines with a selection of milk beverages in "chug-a-lug" containers. Milk flavors include cappucino, strawberry, and chocolate.

According to Bill Magee, New York state Ag Committee representative speaking in an ADADC video presentation, the flavored milk beverages "have been a real hit in the school districts we sampled." Naczi said that the pint-size containers typically sell for $1 — same as a bottle of soda. He reported that sales of milk to children are up, and that wide use of the vending machines could potentially increase total milk sales by 4 percent.

One costlier aspect of placing milk in vending machines is that the machines need to be cooled all the way through — top and bottom, while soda machines only need to cool the product when it approaches the bottom. That makes milk vending machines cost about twice as much as soda machines, Naczi said.

Keeping the milk cold is crucial for shelf life and in making kids want to buy it, according to Naczi.

"We know kids drink more milk when it's cold," he said.

A new, high-temperature pasteurization process might lower the cost of milk vending machines by greatly increasing the shelf life of bottled milk. Developed by Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and recently approved, this special pasteurization can give

Scenic Mountain Co-Op Presents Quality Awards

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — At the recent Scenic Mountain Milk Producers Cooperative annual meeting in Wysox, Jim Patsos of United Ag Services presented awards to the year's best quality producer memebers.

Robert Stoll, Rome, and Claude Arnold, Ulster, received certificates and a monetary award in recognition of their attention to producing top-quality milk.

Scenic Mountain Cooperative is a member of United Ag Services based in Seneca Falls, N.Y.

milk a shelf-life of 6 months, Naczi said.

ADADC has also been instrumental in heading off anti-milk demonstrations put on by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA.)

Naczi said PETA earlier this year had conducted a series of demonstrations targeting children outside of schools in various New York cities. The group carried signs with slogans such as "milk is udder cruelty" and showed video footage in which dairy animals were apparently being mistreated.

When ADADC learned of the demonstrations, they went to work to minimize school kids' exposure to the anti-dairy messages. This included working with school officials to set up alternative exits for children to leave the building without encountering the demonstrators.

ADADC staff also spoke to media personnel at the events, offering TV and newspaper reporters a pro-dairy message to counter the PETA slogans.

Other ADADC activities include creating media attention around positive milk news, such as a recent Italian study showing that calcium-rich diets do not contribute to kidney stones, and that drinking milk can help people stay lean and avoid problems like osteoporosis.

"There's lots of good news on the milk side of things," Naczi said. "There's research out there showing that consuming dairy products actually helps you lose weight."

Dairy famers pay a total of 15 cents to dairy promotion programs for each hundredweight of milk they ship. Two-thirds of these checkoff funds go to regional dairy promotion programs, such as the ADADC, the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association (MDA), and ADADC-Mideast. The remaining 5 cents goes to national dairy promotion efforts.

The ADADC region covers the northeast part of Pennsylvania as well as part of New York state and northern New Jersey. The MDA main office is in Philadelphia and includes the southeast part of Pennsylvania, while ADADC Mid-East covers the western half of the state.

MDA representatives also attended the meeting as partners in promoting milk throughout the region. Laura England, MDA director of communications, said milk promotion funds are divided among the regional groups on a consumer "per capita basis."

ADADC efforts impact milk producers in the southeast part of the state because some of their milk is marketed in the ADADC region, according to George Stambaugh, ADADC District 18 director and a dairyman from Cumberland County.

"The money follows the milk," Stambaugh said, explaining the interconnectedness of the regional groups.

Naczi reported that ADADC's total income and expenses for fiscal year 2002 balanced out at $10,931,250.

About $3.8 million of the expenses went for advertising, $4.4 million for marketing, and $1 million for communications. Of the remaining funds, about $1.2 million were reallocated, and the rest went to administrative expenses and the Rochester Health Foundation.

Funds from Pennsylvania contributed $2.5 million to ADADC's income in 2002.

ADADC District 18 includes Adams, Berks, Chester, Cumberland, Dauphin, Delaware, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Montgomery, Schuylkill, and York counties.

Where Is Your Manure?

Robert E. Graves
Penn State Agricultural,
Biological, and Engineering Extension

Do you know where your manure is?

There is a lot of talk about manure storage and handling. Should I have a solids separator? What kind of pumps should I buy? The list of decisions is endless. But the components are only the beginning. The best components are no good if they are not put together in a complete system that is suitable for your farm. Some methods and machines might work well in hot, dry climates but not in cold humid ones.

Today's manure systems take more than knowing how to start and stop a tractor and drive in a straight line with a manure spreader. Manure in any system is still a potential pollutant. Applying too much manure on a field will defeat the purpose of a well-designed handling system. Leaking pipelines or valves that allow manure to run into streams can quickly compromise an otherwise good plan. An earthen manure storage structure that's riddled with woodchuck holes will allow a manure release sooner or later.

To assure that manure is where you want it to be you must have a good system with proper management and maintenance. Word of mouth is not an adequate method to assure that all workers operate a system correctly and respond to problems appropriately. A written operating plan complete with standard operating procedures (SOP) for use by all operators is a must. Good field maps identifying manure application areas and logbooks are necessary to keep track of where, when, and how much manure is applied.

You can't be sure your manure is where you think it is without regular observation. Self-monitoring, reporting and record keeping is how the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) describes this, and suggests weekly inspections of manure storage and handling systems. Inspection every two weeks and after measurable wet weather events is required for permit holders. What and where to inspect will depend on your system. These inspections should be documented (written down) and, if you are a CAFO operator, reported to DEP.

"The inspections, at a minimum, shall include evaluation of the adequacy, stability, and operation of the manure storage facilities, the continued operation and

Innovative Business Arrangements: Cooperative Farming

Sarah Roth
Penn State
Dairy Alliance

Cooperative farming is some type of arrangement where the individual farm organizations are maintained, but where two or more producers agree to work together to attain greater efficiency and profitability. These arrangements can take numerous forms. The decision as to what arrangement to undertake will depend on the producers involved and what their needs are.

The term cooperative farming is not meant to conjure up images of communist-style collective farms. Rather, it should be thought of as an arrangement where two or more producers decide to work together with the purpose of increasing their efficiency or obtaining benefits, such as milk premiums, for instance, that they would be unable to acquire individually.

You may ask the question "why not form a partnership?" A partnership is a formal business arrangement that would require that the persons entering into it contribute their business assets to the partnership, in effect giving up individual ownership. A cooperative farming arrangement on the other hand can allow the producers to work together in the parts of their businesses that they feel would be beneficial, but still retain individual ownership of their respective businesses.

Let's turn now to a discussion on group farming, a type of cooperative farming, as it could pertain to dairy producers. Imagine three producers all with adequacy of BMPs, Erosion and Sediment Control Plans and where required the Preparedness, Prevention and Contingency (PPC) Plan."

This information is recorded and any problems identified, corrected and a record made of this activity. In simple terms, self-monitoring means the owner/operator is responsible to assure that the manure system is maintained and operated in an environmentally secure manner.

Are you sure you know where your manure is?

somewhat small herds each located within a 20-mile radius of each other. Individually, these producers do not make enough milk to fill a tanker daily. However, they have calculated that collectively, their cows would produce enough milk to fill a tanker each day. Being able to accomplish this would give the producers some leverage with which to negotiate a contract to have their milk hauled to a market where a higher milk price would be received.

The producers' goal is to receive a higher milk price. Now they need to decide how to go about making it possible. Much of what they decide will depend upon each producer's level of comfort with a cooperative arrangement and amount of control they wish to retain. Asking the questions posed in the first article of this series should provide the answers they need to make a decision with which all are comfortable.

It occurs to the producers that they have two options: 1. negotiate an agreement with their milk hauler (assuming they use the same one) whereby the milk is picked up from each farm, but upon arrival at the processor it is viewed as coming from one farm and thus they are paid as a group, or 2. each contribute an appropriate percentage for the construction of new housing and milking facilities where all the milk cows would be kept and milked together. This would add the additional advantage of making the milking enterprise more efficient (and probably more profitable) than three smaller individual enterprises.

In deciding which option to choose, the producers will need to assess their long-term goals, capacity to invest in a new milking center, and personal comfort level. In the example presented above, in either case the producers will need to formulate a way to divide the revenue from milk sales between them in a fair and equitable fashion. Option 1 appears to be the simplest to implement if they can find a hauler and processor agreeable to this type of arrangement. That option is also the easiest to terminate, as the individuals have not invested in a larger facility used by all parties. Option 2, on the other hand, provides the advantages of providing additional cost savings and further cooperative labor activities. If the group is looking for long-term arrangements, this may be the way to go.

Other types of cooperative farming arrangements include:

- A group of producers each owning one or two pieces of equipment or machinery needed to do a task.

DFA Takes Action On MPC Imports

Dairy Farmers of America earlier this fall worked with the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) to attain congressional co-sponsors for two bills in the House and Senate that call for imposing quotas and tariffs on imported Milk Protein Concentrate (MPC) and casein products. These imports have dramatically displaced the sale of U.S. produced milk and nonfat dry milk powder (NFDM) and other milk products.

Gary Hanman, DFA president and chief executive officer, said, "DFA is asking for immediate action on Senate Bill 847 and House Bill 1786 which would restrict the import of Milk Protein Concentrate (MPC) and casein products. Dairy farmers are united on this endeavor. This issue has no regionalism, size distinctions, or difference of opinion among farmers because the building surplus of dairy ingredients is the visible proof that imported blended proteins are unfairly and negatively effecting the sale of domestic products."

Milk protein concentrates are powdered milk products containing between 40 and 90 percent complete milk protein. Imported powdered milk products with less than 40 percent complete milk protein would be classified as nonfat dry milk and would be subject to a tariff-rate quota. Because MPC was not considered a dairy product by the World Trade Organization, MPC limits were not included in the last round of dairy tariff-rate quotas.

Innovative Arrangements

such as for crop work, rather than each owning everything needed. The producers would then each have access to all the pieces of equipment. And,

- A group of producers coming to an arrangement whereby one (or more, depending on the number in the group) producer was responsible for all the activities within a particular enterprise for all the farms.

Other forms of cooperative farming arrangements can probably be put into place. Those producers looking for way to become more efficient and profitable should take the time to look "outside the box" to see if there's an innovative farming arrangement that could work for them. Keep in mind that anyone considering a cooperative arrangement should carefully analyze the advantages and disadvantages of all options.

Cornell Offers Organic Dairy Transition Resources

ITHACA, N.Y. — The number of certified organic dairy farms is on the increase in the Northeast. Organic herds number about 300 in Pennsylvania, New York, and New England.

Some dairy farmers, looking to increase their income potential, are considering organic production because it typically increases revenues $3-$9 more per hundredweight than conventional milk. Other dairy farmers have expressed an interest from a more philosophical point of view, citing lifestyle preferences and benefits to the environment from organic practices.

Whatever the motivation, producers find that organic milk production is significantly different from conventional dairy farming. These differences amount to more than just the absence of commercial fertilizers, antibiotics, and pesticides. An organic dairy farm produces a unique product, which is marketed through alternative channels to a new and relatively small segment of consumers.

Transitioning to the production of certified organic milk takes several years to accomplish and represents a major business move, placing the farm family's livelihood temporarily at risk. Many decision variables need to be considered before undertaking the transition.

A new workbook is available to help farmers explore the possibilities and develop a plan for transitioning from conventional dairy farming to organic production.

The Organic Decision: Making the Transition to Organic Dairy Production was developed by Cornell Cooperative Extension specialists in consultation with the Northeast Dairy Producers Alliance. This very practical, 40 page workbook takes a hard look at questions like:

- How stable is the market for organic milk? A discussion of the trends in milk marketing and organic milk will give a realistic view of future organic milk price possibilities.
- How much will it cost? Budget worksheets explore what transitioning to organic production may cost your dairy farm.
- What are the yield reductions in forage production? An inventory balance calculator helps you determine forage needs before, during, and after transition.
- What are the herd health considerations? What milk production, cull rate, disease incidence, and veterinary costs are reasonable to expect during your transition period?

Producer-Funded Research Moves Scientific Advances To Marketplace

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Each year, thousands of new food product and technology innovations are introduced throughout the United States. Thanks in part to the national dairy producer checkoff program, numerous dairy product and technology introductions and improvements also hit the consumer marketplace yearly to help increase overall dairy sales.

"Dairy producers are committed to generating dairy product and technology innovations," said Dr. Bill Haines, vice president of business-to-business marketing for Dairy Management Inc., which manages the national dairy checkoff on behalf of America's dairy producers.

"Dairy checkoff innovations helped lay the foundation for dairy ingredients to be used in new ways, such as in sports nutrition and 'energy' foods and beverages, as well as new technologies that create more 'shelf-stable' dairy products," said Haines.

Recent product and technology innovations to help build demand include:

• Pizza Hut, the nation's largest pizza restaurant chain, currently uses a mozzarella cheese developed from checkoff-funded research in its P'Zone, a combination of a pizza and a calzone. Working with cheese plants, researchers created a direct-salted, pressed, no-burn mozzarella cheese that allows cheese manufacturers to customize functional and physical cheese characteristics based on the specific needs of the end

• Dairy food research centers collaborated with Mac Farms to develop several unique carbonated dairy-based beverages. Researchers helped formulate the product and developed the carbon dioxide injection system. Additionally, researchers were involved with optimizing packaging, nutritional efficacy and product stability. The beverages target specific audiences: e-Moo® targets kids with fun flavors such as Orange Sparkle and Bubble Blast; RPM® (Refreshing Power Milk) targets physically active adults with all the nutrition of fat-free milk, plus additional potassium and magnesium fortification.

• Researchers are developing processing practices that manufacture aged lowfat cheese with good flavor, body and texture by removing fat after the cheese is aged. Better-tasting, reduced-fat cheeses could secure a significant consumer market with Americans who have shied away from eating cheese because of concerns about dietary fat intake.

• Technology research has led to the development of whey protein polymers that act as thickening agents, opening new market possibilities for whey as a food ingredient. Replacing existing fat and gums with whey protein polymers helps boost the nutritional appeal of processed foods and helps create many types of lowfat foods — including cheese, yogurt, baked goods soups, salad dressings, and sauces.

"As we continue to produce more milk, the need to find new uses for dairy ingredients is more important than ever," said Elwood Kirkpatrick, a Michigan dairy producer and chairman of DMI's dairy export and dry ingredients program committee. "By funding innovative research that will meet the needs of the American public, we've helping build demand for all dairy products long term."

Agri-Basics Expands Dairy Nutrition Opportunities

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy producers in the west and northcentral parts of the state have new opportunities to work with an independent nutrition consultant as Agri-Basics, Inc. welcomes two new members to the team. Don Fair is serving the Bedford/Blair County areas and Bob Rich the Juniata/Perry area.

Agri-Basics, Inc. was founded in the late 1980s by a few independent nutritionists with the basic idea of challenging producers to greater competitiveness in the production of milk and beef. Today, the association of independent AB consultants has grown to include 13 nutritionists and the Agri-Basics Soil Service comprised of five independent crop and soil specialists.

"Agriculture is the only industry where producers buy retail and sell wholesale, and the expenses tend not to fluctuate with the income level," Fair said. "Feed is the number one expense on the dairy farm. As an independent Agri-Basics nutritionist, I like the fact that I can truly be objective in consulting my customers. This allows more creativity and flexibility and opens more options to help my customers achieve their goals and hone in on their bottom line."

"Agri-Basics has built a reputation for feeding the best herds," Rich said. "This is a great opportunity for me to work in an atmosphere of flexibility and total independence."

Fair graduated from Penn State in 1994, with a bachelor's degree in agricultural systems management and technology. He grew up in Lancaster County, where his father was involved in the feed mill business, and where he worked throughout his high school and college years.

Before joining Agri-Basics, Inc. this summer, Fair worked in dairy nutrition for six years with Agway, where he was promoted to western Pennsylvania sales manager for Agway Farm Seeds in 2000. His degree in agricultural systems management and technology adds to his livestock and dairy nutrition background — encompassing ag business with aspects of ag engineering.

"I enjoy the dairy nutrition business because I like working with different people in a variety of environments," Fair said. "I like knowing that as an independent nutritionist my total focus is to do the best, most economical job I can to help my customers accomplish their individual family and business goals."

Rich has nearly three decades of experience in the feed business. He grew up on a dairy farm in upstate New York, and graduated with a degree in ag business from Alfred College of Agriculture and Technology.

Rich has worked for Wayne Feeds, Blue Seal, and most recently, Annlick Farm Supply. "I enjoy the challenge of working with dairy cows," Rich said. "And I like working with dairy farmers. They're good people."

Backus Pedigree Joins Dairy Business

EAST SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Backus Pedigree Company of Mexico, N.Y., will join the DairyBusiness group effective Jan. 1, 2003, according to a company announcement.

The nationally known pedigree company, founded in 1912 by R. Austin Backus, has published over 5,000 Holstein auction sale catalogs. It will continue under present management until Dec. 31. Beginning in 2003, pedigrees will be compiled and arranged at the Holstein World offices in East Syracuse, N.Y. The catalogs will continue to be printed by the Backus newspaper operation.

Horace Backus noted that, "When it became apparent that the pedigree company should be sold, only one contact was made and that was with Holstein World. They seemed the ideal fit with their 100-year history of serving the Holstein public, their highly-experienced and very capable staff and their vast picture files. We look forward with confidence to the continuation of our 90-year legacy in their hands."

DairyBusiness President Joel Hastings stated, "We were extremely pleased that we were approached by them with this opportunity. Certainly the contributions of the entire Backus family and staff have been appreciated by everyone in the Holstein industry. We are fortunate that Horace will be continuing to read pedigrees at sales, as well as serving in an advisory capacity."

"By this purchase, we can now offer our customers the complete package of communications tools. From advertising and website development to sales listings and catalog production, DairyBusiness is truly the business resource for the Holstein industry."

Land O'Lakes' Delegates Tour California Dairies

TULARE, Calif. — Land O'Lakes delegates and directors traveled to Tulare, Calif., for the Joint Leadership Conference in August. During the week, the delegates toured the new Cheese and Protein International plant and other Land O'Lakes facilities, visited local dairy operations and caught a glimpse of the California ag industry.

Unit delegate Levi Ransom and his wife, Lu Ann, attended the conference.

"It was quite an eye opener to see the dairy operations out there," said Ransom, who milks 100 cows in Nicholson. "We visited two dairies — the one milked 2,400 Holsteins and the other had 5,000 Jersey cows. They were both something you'd have to see to believe."

One of the most interesting things Ransom saw was a 72-cow rotary parlor at the 2,400-cow dairy. "The milking efficiency was incredible, with cows spending about 12 minutes on the rotary parlor," he says. "The average milking time was four-and-a-half minutes, and it only took three men to operate it — one to prep, one to milk and a third to operate the post-dippers."

Ransom was surprised to see such high-quality animals on that farm. "I saw the cows walking into that parlor, and there wasn't one of them that I wouldn't want in my barn," he said.

Both dairy operations had freestall facilities. On the Holstein dairy, two 1,100-foot long barns sloped toward each other with a flush system in the center. Sprinklers cooled the cows in the summer months.

According to Ransom, California producers can get seven cuttings of alfalfa in a normal growing season. "They double crop corn with yields of 35-40 tons per acre per crop, and everything is irrigated," he said adding that the average rainfall is six to 10 inches per year, falling mainly from November through February.

While in California, Ransom and the other delegates also toured the new CPI plant, owned by a joint venture between Land O'Lakes and Mitsui, and the original Land O'Lakes plant in Tulare.

"I was most impressed with the fact that all of the milk coming into those two plants is within a 30-40 mile radius of the plants," he said. "The 224 producers in that radius produce more milk than all of the Land O'Lakes Mid-Atlantic members combined."

Adjusting Photoperiod For Dairy Cattle

Zhiguo Wu and Travis D. Edwards
Dairy and Animal
Science Extension

Photoperiod is a term used to describe the duration of light and darkness within a 24-hour period. Seasonal breeders change their breeding behaviors according to photoperiods. Animals that are not seasonal breeders, like dairy cows, are also affected by photoperiod. There has been an increasing number of studies reported regarding photoperiod in dairy cattle. Some of the studies determined the effect of changing the length of photoperiod during lactation, and some during the dry period. The data seem to point in one direction: Photoperiod is for real.

Studies published in the Journal of Dairy Science in 2000 and 2002 reported that cows produced 4.4 pounds more milk when exposed to long day photoperiod (average 17 hours of light) than short day photoperiod (average 10 hours of light).

Dry cows, however, were found to benefit from more dark hours, going on to produce more milk during lactation if they were not exposed to the long day photoperiod when dry. The short day photoperiod was also found to boost immune function in Holstein steers.

How Does It Work

The periods of light and darkness act upon receptors in the pineal gland, stimulating many responses. In the dairy cow, the three primary substances affected by the photoperiod are IGF-I, prolactin, and melatonin. IGF-I is released in response to light, and melatonin to darkness. As the circulating levels of melatonin increase, the levels of prolactin and IGF-I decrease.

Cows exposed to long day photoperiod (LDPP) have a consistently higher concentration of IGF-I in plasma (Dahl, et al., 2000. J. Dairy Sci. 83:885). IGF-I is the same substance that is stimulated by bST injections. Interestingly, the effect of LDPP and bST may be additive, meaning that one does not replace the other. If you use both methods, you may get a greater milk yield response than by using just one. A LDPP is also associated with increased levels of prolactin, which is important to milk secretion.

Auchtung, et al. (2002. J. Dairy Sci. 85, Suppl. 1:21) concluded that short day photoperiod (SDPP) increases immune function in dairy cattle. It is possible

Tips For Reducing Feed Costs

Penn State
Dairy Alliance

The current scenario of high feed costs, low milk prices, and less than ideal forage quality has put many producers in a quandary how to get maximum production without going broke. Here are five simple steps that a producer can follow to reduce feed costs without affecting production:

1. Evaluate the current forage inventory.

Planning the year's forage inventory allows for a projection of the concentrate ingredient usage. This could be advantageous to locking in prices for certain commodities. If a complete grain mix is used, consider getting feed bids from at least three companies on the same formula. Planning the 2002-2003 feeding strategy now not only helps control feed costs, but a cow's performance is optimized when the ration remains consistent over the long term. Major changes in forage quantities fed, requiring the nutritionist to make significant alterations to the diet, usually result in decreased production.

2. Monitor dry matters regularly on high moisture feeds.

Control the ration being fed by monitoring dry matter of the silages and high moisture grain on a routine basis. This can reduce the risk of over-feeding or under-feeding a forage or a concentrate and causing an imbalance of nutrients, especially protein and energy.

3. Check mineral levels in the diet, especially phosphorus.

Most nutritionists are guilty to some degree of including a buffer when formulating diets. For many dairy farms, this is unnecessary. Phosphorus is a good example. There have been numerous studies conducted over multiple lactations that show diets formulated to the 2001 NRC recommendations will not impede production or reproduction. Try this simple check: look at the current ration for the lactating herd. If the phosphorus level is greater than 0.44 percent, than it is very likely that the phosphorus level can be lowered, which will help reduce feed costs. An Excel spreadsheet is available from Penn State which evaluates groups of cows, and lists phosphorus requirements based on the new NRC. (E-mail vishler@psu.edu for a copy.)

4. Consider reducing protein in the ration by at least 1 percent.

Cows do not have a crude protein requirement per se, but rather requirements for amino acids. Protein levels can be lowered if the following criteria are met:

- The nutritionist is balancing for rumen degradable and undegradable protein.
- A computer model is being used that examines the levels of amino acids in the diet.
- Forage quality is not a limiting factor affecting dry matter intake.
- Milk urea nitrogen (MUN) is being used as a tool to evaluate the nutritional status of the herd.
- The herd is being monitored on a regular basis for production and milk components.

5. Justify the use of a feed additive.

The vast majority of farms are feeding multiple additives to their cows. Now is the time to seriously evaluate and prioritize additives being fed and what they are providing to the cow. For example, it is highly that circulating melatonin is what affects the immune system. According to Maestroni (www.photobiology.com), when SDPP signals the release of melatonin, immune system components such as T-Helper cells, cytokines, and phagocytes increase in number and responsiveness. These cells are among the first to respond to a viral or bacterial invasion. This bolstering of the immune system appears to allow animals to better handle stressful situations such as calving, entering the milking herd, mastitis infections, and feed changes.

Where And How Much?

To implement LDPP, lights should be placed throughout the housing area, as well as the feed bunk area. Cows spend a lot of time lying down in stalls. Even though they are not eating, the effect of light can still be realized.

Some producers may have a tendency to think, "if 18 hours of light is good, 24-hour lighting will be even better, right"? Wrong. The benefits of manipulating the photoperiod hinge on the fact that at some point, darkness is signaled. This allows the animal to measure day length. Without this signal, the cow tends to revert back to a natural SDPP rhythm. This means minimizing all light sources during the selected hours of darkness. Cows do not need a "nightlight" to see the feed bunk or waterers. They can maneuver in the darkness to eat and drink. Try to choose and place lights so that they provide about 20 foot candles of light at the cow level. The minimum intensity is about 15 foot candles, with no additional benefits seen above 20. When installing a lighting system, contact your local extension office or an ag engineer to assist you in measuring for lights and placement.

TMR Management And Control Points

A. Jud Heinrichs
Penn State
Science Extension

Feeding management is a critical part of using total mixed rations (TMRs) providing a complete nutritional program for your cows. TMRs were instituted for many reasons. Two primary nutritional reasons were to eliminate sorting of feeds and to allow accurate determination of dry matter intake. To control these two fundamental principles, several aspects of feeding must be monitored and evaluated routinely.

Elimination of sorting (individual cows eating only select feeds instead of all feeds) is the goal of a true TMR and is essential to feeding balanced rations. However, the TMR needs to be well mixed, must not separate after mixing, and should discourage sorting during the day. The control point for monitoring sorting is TMR particle size distribution.

First, sample several places within the bunk immediately after feeding to evaluate TMR mixing. Return four to eight hours after feeding for another set of samples, and then measure refusals before the following day's feeding. This series of samples will allow you to determine if cows are sorting during the day and over a 24-hour period.

If you find greater than five percent difference in particle size distribution of samples taken during the day, sorting is probably occurring, which can easily lead to short periods of rumen acidosis. If particle size distribution of refusals is vastly different from what was fed, sorting and forage quality are likely a problem. You may find one or both of these sorting problems with the same TMR.

Finding only a small amount of unpalatable feed left in the feed bunk could indicate offering too little feed and therefore limiting dry matter intake.

These sorting control points need to be measured on probable that molds and mycotoxins will be an issue this year. In this case, an additive that has proven itself in minimizing herd problems should not be eliminated from the ration. However, if an additive is being fed and the benefits are not obvious, maybe it's time to discontinue using that product.

TMR Management And Control Points

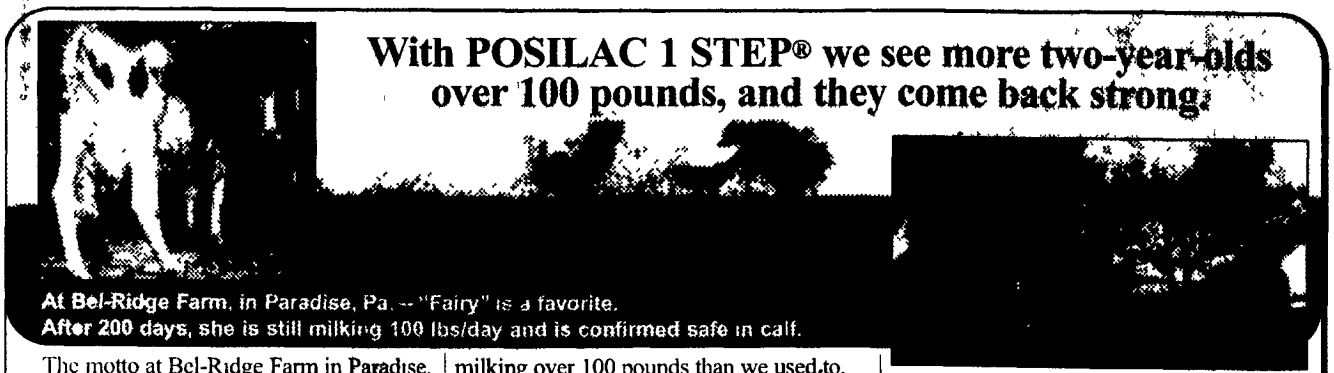
a regular basis, the timing of which is likely determined by major ration changes or feedstuff changes.

The next control point is determining daily DMI of individual cows or average DMI of groups. For best results, be sure to determine that the TMR is properly mixed and not being sorted before monitoring DMI. Keeping up with DMI is necessary to maintain a balanced ration, especially for protein and energy, which are the two nutrients needed in greatest amounts, and are critical for production and maintenance of body weight. Underfeeding either will result in decreased production, while overfeeding will result in unnecessary feed costs and wasting of nutrients.

To determine DMI you must know feed and forage dry matters. The critical feedstuff that will change in dry matter content most often is silage. The frequency of silage dry matter checks is related to the storage structure used and the amount used out of the structure per day. I recommend checking dry matters twice a week with some variance made for the structure and known silage variability. For example, corn silage made in a short period of time and stored in a bunker silo is likely to have little variability in dry matter from week to week. Haycrop silage harvested from several small fields and stored in a bag-type silo is likely to have great dry matter variability from day to day as material from different fields is fed. Forage dry matter should be determined at least twice weekly when using corn silage or haylage. Sampling should be done more often at the beginning and end of each silo where changes are the greatest.

Routine evaluation of particle size distribution, DMI, and forage dry matter will help maximize the benefits of TMRs and help you meet the nutritional needs of your cows.



With POSILAC 1 STEP® we see more two-year-olds over 100 pounds, and they come back strong.

At Bel-Ridge Farm, in Paradise, Pa. – "Fairy" is a favorite. After 200 days, she is still milking 100 lbs/day and is confirmed safe in calf.

The motto at Bel-Ridge Farm in Paradise, Pa is "beg milk from the cow, don't force it," says the farm owner and manager. The combination of cow comfort, attention to forage quality, and POSILAC 1 STEP® have coaxed the Bel-Ridge herd of about 50 cows from an RHA of 18,000 pounds to 27,000 pounds of milk

In fact, the production increase made it necessary to replace the 600-gallon bulk tank with one that holds 1000

"We can really see the results," the Bel-Ridge owner and manager explains "When we gave the herd a more comfortable cow stable and POSILAC in 1997 – the average came up real fast"

"We see more of our two-year-olds milking over 100 pounds than we used to. And in their second lactation they're coming back strong. Our culling and conception rates are as good or better than before POSILAC. We focus a lot of attention on forage quality because forages are the biggest key to cow health and reproduction"

"In the heat of summer, our cows are tested pretty hard. POSILAC does its part helping the cows maintain intake and production And we have to do our part managing them Appetites really pick up, so we make the extra effort to keep fresh feed in front of the cows, especially in the summer"

"POSILAC also makes it profitable to keep a cow that has aborted because her production stays high enough to keep milking her. We had a first calf heifer fresh 620 days She made more than 50,000 pounds of milk for us. Because of POSILAC we could keep her and breed her again, and she came back to make 30,000 pounds in her second lactation, and now she's safe in calf for a third lactation. POSILAC extended that first lactation, so we could give her another chance."

"POSILAC pays even when milk prices are low. We don't change our herd management in times of lower prices. We look for other ways to keep our cost of production down. We have to keep things in place that keep production up and keep the cash flow."

Pennsylvania Dairy Personnel Attend PR Workshops

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Workshops conducted this fall in Altoona, Lancaster, and Lewistown provided nutrition consultants, nutrient management specialists, and producers practical information about phosphorus, policy and regulations.

Phosphorus-based nutrient management requirements are no longer on the horizon — they are here! Dairy Alliance, in cooperation with PennAg Industries, Inc. developed a program to update the dairy industry on environmental issues related to phosphorus and nitrogen, state and federal regulations, the phosphorus index, and nutrition. When participants were asked about what they learned, some responded as follows:

"The program was well executed and I learned several new things related to the P-index, how funds are administered, who controls regulations, and who to contact."

"I thought the program was going to be really technical, but it turned out the information was very practical."

"I had misconceptions about the P-index, now I realize it is a very flexible tool for managing manure application."

Dairy PR focuses on the choices available to producers for managing their nutrients while complying with policies being set regarding water and air quality. The challenge faced by the livestock industry is the constant change in environmental policy and the confusion on who needs to comply to state and federal regulations.

Because environmental issues will continue to be in the forefront, producers and ag professionals need the means and opportunity for obtaining information. Dairy PR provides one option in meeting that objective. Dairy Alliance has also developed a central web address for finding time sensitive material related to nutrient management: HYPERLINK "http://nutrient.psu.edu" http://nutrient.psu.edu.

DAIRY FARMERS of AMERICA

We Finance Rural America.

Our representatives come from agricultural and rural backgrounds and have the financial "know how" to help make your businesses work. Our specialty is applying our knowledge to help you achieve your hopes and dreams for your farms and rural agricultural businesses.

All of our representatives work very hard at making themselves accessible to you. The best way to get to know someone's business is to go see it first-hand. That's why we spend most of our time visiting farms and rural businesses just like yours.

When you need help exploring financing alternatives, call someone with the knowledge to help you find the best way to make your enterprise successful. Call someone who will take the time to visit your operation and see it first-hand. Call someone who wants you to succeed. Your success is our success. Call Telmark.
